THE present work, both in its Sanskrit portion and in its English, is an amended reprint of three volumes, published in India, which have already become very scarce. An abridged form of those volumes, which subsequently ² Occupying Fasciculi 32 and 81 of the New Series of the Bibliotheca Indica, issued in 1862 and 1865. The proof-sheets of only 32 pages of the whole, from the beginning, were read by Dr. Ballantyne; the rest, by Professor Cowell.

The title of the abridged form runs: "The Sánkhya Aphorisms of Kapila, with Extracts from Vijnána Bhiks[h]u's Commentary," &c. But this is a misrepresentation, as regards Book I., which takes up 63 pages out of the total of 175. The expository matter in that Book is derived, very largely, from other commentators than Vijnána.

appeared, contains nothing of the Sanskrit original but the Aphorisms.

While, in the following pages, all the corrections obtainable from the abridgment have been turned to account, an immense number of improved readings have been taken from another source. Three several times I carefully read Dr. Ballantyne's translation in as many different copies of it; entering suggestions, in the second copy, without reference to those which had been entered in the first, and similarly making independent suggestions in my third copy. All these' were, on various occasions, submitted to Dr. Ballantyne; and such of them as did not meet his approval were crossed through. The residue, many more than a thousand, have been embodied Vedánti Mahádeva mainly supplies it at the outset, and, tówards the end, well nigh exclusively, Aniruddha. Some share of it, however, will not be traced; it having been furnished by one of Dr. Ballantyne's pandits, whom I have repeatedly seen in the very act, as by his own acknowledgment, of preparing his elucidations.

Though not fully published till 1856, my edition of the Sankhya-pravachana-bháshya, its preface alone excepted, was in print as early as 1853; and Dr. Ballantyne had a copy of it. A few arbitrarily chosen words apart, his text, after Book I., is borrowed from it throughout, but with no mention of the fact. My advice was unheeded, that he should profit by the copious emendations which I had amassed and digested from better manuscripts than those to which I at first had access. Greatly to his disservice, he would not be induced even to look at them. It faring the same with my typographical cornections, he has, here and there, reproduced errors, more or less gross, which might easily have been avoided. See, for specimens, pp. 197, 288, 357, 373, 374, 381, 390.

Many of them, especially in Books II.—VI., rest on readings of the original preferable to those which had been accepted.

in the ensuing sheets, but are not indicated, as successively introduced. The renderings proposed in the footnotes are, for the most part, from among those which have recently occurred to me as eligible.

That Dr. Ballantyne had any thought of reissuing, in whatever form, the volumes mentioned at the beginning of this Advertisement, I was unaware, till some years after he had made over the abridgment of them to Professor Cowell, for publication.² Otherwise, I should have placed at his disposal the materials towards improvement of his second edition, which, at the cost of no slight drudgery, are here made available.

The Sánkhya Aphorisms, in all the known commentaries on them, are exhibited word for word. The variants, now given, of the Aphorisms, afforded by accessible productions of that character, have been drawn from the works, of which only one has yet been printed, about to be specified:³

I. The Sánkhya-pravachana-bháshya, by Vijnána Bhikshu. Revelant particulars I have given elsewhere. My oldest MS. of it was transcribed in 1654.

³ For details respecting these commentaries and their authors, see my Contribution towards an Index to the Bibliography of the Indian Philosophical Systems, or my Preface to the Sánkhya-sára.

II. The Kápila - sánkhya - pravachana - sútra-vritti, by Aniruddha. Of this I have consulted, besides a MS. copied in 1818, formerly the property of Dr. Ballantyne, one which I procured to be copied, in 1855, from an old MS. without date.

III. The Laghu-sánkhya-sútra-vritti, by Nágeśa. Of this I have two MSS., both undated. One of them is entire; but the other is defective by the three first Books.

IV. The Sánkhya-pravachana-sútra-vritti-sára, by Vedánti Mahádeva. Here, again, only one of two MSS. which I possess is complete. The other, which breaks off in the midst of the comment on Book II., Aph. 15, is, in places, freely interpolated from No. I. Neither of them has a date.

Nearly all my longer annotations, and some of the shorter, were scrutinized, while in the rough, by the learned Professor Cowell, but for whose searching criticisms, which cannot be valued too highly, they would, in several instances, have been far less accurate than they now are.

Marlesford, Suffolk, Aug. 28, 1884.

¹ I once had a second copy of this very rare work, bearing no date, but most venerable in appearance. Like many of my manuscript treasures, it was lent, and never found its way back to me.

PREFACE.

The great body of Hindu Philosophy is based upon six sets of very concise Aphorisms. Without a commentary, the Aphorisms are scarcely intelligible; they being designed, not so much to communicate the doctrine of the particular school, as to aid, by the briefest possible suggestions, the memory of him to whom the doctrine shall have been already communicated. To this end they are admirably adapted; and, this being their end, the obscurity which must needs attach to them, in the eyes of the uninstructed, is not chargeable upon them as a fault.

For various reasons it is desirable that there should be an accurate translation of the Aphorisms, with so much of gloss as may be required to render them intelligible. A class of pandits in the Benares Sanskrit College having been induced to learn English, it is contemplated that a version of the Aphorisms, brought out in successive portions, shall be submitted to the criticism of these men, and, through them, of other learned Bráhmans, so that any errors in the version may have the best chance of being discovered and rectified. The employment of such a version as a class-book is designed to subserve, further, the attempt to determine accurately the aspect of the philosophical terminology of the East, as regards that of the West.

These pages, now submitted to the criticism of the pandits who read English, are to be regarded as proof-sheets awaiting correction. They invite discussion.

BOOK I.

- a. Salutation to the illustrious sage, Kapila!1
- b. Well, the great sage, Kapila, desirous of raising the world [from the Slough of Despond in which he found it sunk], perceiving that the knowledge of the excellence of any fruit, through the desire [which this excites] for the fruit, is a cause of people's betaking themselves to the means [adapted to the attainment of the fruit], declares [as follows] the excellence of the fruit [which he would urge our striving to obtain]:²

अय चिविधदुःखात्यन्तिनवृत्तिरत्यन्तपुरुषार्थः॥१॥

The subject proposed.

Aph. 1. Well, the complete cessation of pain [which is] of three kinds is the complete end of man.

[े] श्रीकपिलमुनये नमः॥

- a. The word 'well' serves as a benediction; the particle atha being regarded as an auspicious one].
- b. By saying that the complete cessation of pain, which is of three kinds,—viz., (1) due to one's self (údhyátmika), (2) due to products of the elements (údhibhautika), and (3) due to supernatural causes (údhidaivika),—is the complete end of man, he means to say that it is the chief end of man, among the four human aims, [viz., merit, wealth, pleasure, and liberation (see Sáhitya-darpana,§2)]; because the three are transitory, whereas liberation is not transi-

c. But then, let it be that the above-A question whether the end may not be attained mentioned cessation [of all the three by ordinary means. kinds of pain is the complete end of man; still, what reason is there for betaking one's self to a doctrinal system which is the cause of a knowledge of the truth, in the shape of the knowledge of the difference between Nature and Soul, when there are easy remedies for bodily pains, viz., drugs, &c., and remedies for mental pains, viz., beautiful women and delicate food, &c., and remedies for pains due to products of the elements, viz., the residing in impregnable localities, &c., as is enjoined in the institutes of polity, and remedies for pains due to supernatural causes, viz., gems [such as possess marvellous prophylactic properties], and spells, and herbs of mighty power, &c.; and when [on the other hand], since it is hard to get one to grapple with that very difficult knowledge of truth which can be perfected only by the toil of many successive births, it must be still more hard to get one to betake himself to the doctrinal system [which treats of the knowledge in question]? Therefore [i.e., seeing that this may be asked] he declares [as follows]:

न दृष्टात्रत्सिडिनिंवृत्तेरप्यनुवृत्तिदर्शनात् ॥ २ ॥

The end is not to be attained by ordinary means.

Aph. 2. The effectuation of this [complete cessation of pain] is not [to be expected] by means of the visible [such as wealth, &c.]; for we see [on the loss of wealth, &c.,] the restoration [of the misery and evil,] after [its temporary] cessation.

- a. 'The visible,' in the shape of the drugs, &c., above-mentioned' [§ 1. c.].
- b. 'The effectuation of this,' i.e., the effectuation of the complete cessation of pain.²
- c. Why is it not [to be thus effected]? Because, after the cessation (the cessation of pain is understood), we see its restoration, the springing up again of pain in general, from whichever of its three sources (\S 1. b.).
- d. The state of the matter is this: not by the expedients above-mentioned is there such a removal of pain, that no pain arises thereafter; for, when, by this or that expedient, this or that pain has been destroyed, we see other pains springing up. Therefore, though it be not easy [§1. c.], the knowledge of truth [as a complete remedy] is to be desired.
- e. But then, grant that future pain is not debarred by drugs, &c., [employed to remove present pain], still, by again and again obviating it [as often as it presents itself], there may be the cessation of future pain, also. This doubt he states [as follows]:

प्रात्यहिकसुत्प्रतीकारवक्तमतीकारचेष्टनात्पुरु-षार्थलम् ॥ ३ ॥

The question whether the end may not be attained by the recurrent use of ordinary means. Aph. 3. [Let us consider the doubt] that the soul's desire [the cessation of pain, may result] from exertions for the obviation [of pain], as is the case with the obviation of daily hunger.

a. When pain shall arise [let us suppose one to argue], then it is to be obviated; and thus there is the soul's desire, the cessation of pain; just as one should eat, when there is hunger; and thus there is the soul's desire of the eater, viz., the cessation of hunger. In regard to this [doubt] he states the recognized decision:²

सर्वासंभवात्संभवेऽपि सत्त्वासंभवाडेयः प्रमाण-कुण्लैः ॥ ४ ॥

- े ननु मा भूदीषधादिभिभीविदुः खनिवृत्तिस्तथा-पि पुनः पुनः प्रतीकारकरणे तु भाविदुः खनिवृ-त्तिरिप स्यादिति शङ्कते।
- ैयदा दुःखमुत्पत्यते तदा तत्प्रतिकर्तेष्यं तथा च दुःखनिवृत्तिः पुरुषार्थो यथा यदा क्षुत्रदा भा-क्रव्यं भुज्ञानस्य क्षुन्तिवृत्तिः पुरुषार्थे इति सिज्ञान्त-यति ॥

The more ordinary reading of MSS., and that of Aniruddha, is Hallo, 'excellence,' not Hallo, with Vijnana. Ed.

Aph. 4. This [method of palliatives (§3)] is to be rejected by those who are versed in evidence; because it is not everywhere possible [to employ it at all], and because, even if this were possible, there would be an impossibility as regards [ensuring] the perfect fitness [of the agents employed].

- a. For there are not physicians, &c., in every place and at all times; and [to rely on physicians, &c., would not be advisable], even if there were the possibility,—i.e., even if these were [always at hand], since physicians are not perfect [in their art];—for pain cannot with certainty be got rid of by means of physicians, &c., with their drugs, &c. Moreover, when corporeal pain has departed, there may still be that which is mental, &c.; so that there is not [under such circumstances], in every respect, liberation from pain. For these reasons, such a soul's aim [as that which contents itself with temporary palliatives] is to be rejected by those who are versed in evidence, [i.e., who are acquainted with authoritative treatises].
 - b. He mentions another proof² [of his assertion]:

[ं] निह सर्वेरिमन्देशे सर्वेरिमन्काले वैद्यादयः सन्ति संभवेऽपि सन्वेऽपि वैद्यादीनां सन्त्वाभावा-बहि वैद्यादिभिरप्यवश्यमोषधादिना दुःखं हातुं शक्यते। किं च शारीरदुःखापगमे मानसादेलस्य संभव इति न सर्वथा दुःखादिमोकः। तस्मान्प्र-माणकुश्लैरीदृग्विधपुरुषार्थो हेय इति॥

[ै] युक्त्यन्तरमाह ॥

उत्कर्षादिप माक्षस्य सर्वान्कर्षस्रुतेः ॥ ५ ॥

Scriptural evidence in favour of this view.

Aph. 5. Also [an inferior method ought not to be adopted,] because of the preeminence of Liberation [as proved] by the text [of Scripture declaratory] of its preeminence above all else.

- a. One ought not to endeavour after the removal of this or that pain by these and those expedients [§ 1. c.]; since Liberation (moksha), by being eternal, is transcendent as a remover of all pains. Moreover, one ought to endeavour only after the knowledge of truth, which is the means thereof [i. c., of Liberation]; because the Scripture tells its pre-eminence above all [other objects of endeavour], in the text: 'There is nothing beyond the gaining of Soul,' [with the utter exclusion of pain].'
- b. But then [it may be suggested], when you say liberation, we understand you to mean from bondage. And is that bondage essential? Or is it adventitious? In the former case, it is incapable of destruction; if it come under the latter head, it will perish of itself, [like any other adventitious and, therefore, transitory thing]. What have we to do with your 'knowledge of truth,' then? To this he replies [as follows]:²

[ं] न तैस्तैरपायैस्तत्तद्दुः खें छिदे यतितव्यं मेश्यस्य नित्यत्वेन सर्वदुः खें छिद्र हपनेने । आत्म-लाभात्यरं न विद्यत इति सर्वे । स्कृतेरपि तत्सा-धने तस्त्रज्ञान एव यतितव्यम् ॥

[ै] ननु मोक्ष इत्युक्ते बन्धादिति प्रतीयते। स च

ऋविशेषश्चीभयोः ॥ ६॥

An objection met.

An objection met.

Anolytical and there is no difference between the two.

- a. There is no difference in the applicability of liberation, on either of the suppositions, that the bondage is essential, and that it is adventitious, [supposing it were either (see § 19. b.)]. That is to say, we can tell both how the bondage takes place, and how the liberation takes place.
- b. Now, with the view of demonstrating [the real nature of] Bondage and Liberation, he declares, exclusively, in the first place, the objections to Bondage's being essential³ [§ 5. b.]:

न स्वभावता बडस्य माह्यसाधनापदेशविधिः॥७॥

Liberation must be possible; else the means would not have been enjoined Aph. 7. There would be no rule in the enjoining of means for the liberation of one bound essentially.

बन्धः किं स्वाभाविक उतागन्तुकः। आद्ये ना-शायागाऽन्ये चेत्स्वत एव नङ्ख्यति। किं तस्वज्ञा-नेनेत्यत आह॥

- ¹ उभयोर्बन्धस्य स्वाभाविकागन्तुकत्वयोर्भीः स्र-स्योपादेयत्वेऽविशेषः। यथा बन्धस्योपपित्तर्येथा च मोष्ठस्य तथा वयं वक्तं शक्तम इत्यर्थः॥
- ^² अप बन्धमाश्ययोरुपपत्यर्थमादी तावत्स्वा-भाविकत्वे बन्धस्य दूषणान्याह॥

- a. Since Liberation has been stated [§ 1] to result from the complete cessation of pain, [it follows that] Bondage is the junction of pain; and this is not essential in man. For, if that were the case, then there would be no rule, i.e., no fitness, in the Scriptural or legal injunction of means for liberation: such is what must be supplied, [to complete the aphorism]. Because, to explain our meaning [by an illustration], fire cannot be liberated from its heat, which is essential to it; since that which is essential exists as long as the substance exists.¹
- b. And it has been declared in the Divine Song [the Iśwara-gítá,]: 'If the soul were essentially foul, or impure, or changeable, then its liberation could not take place even through hundreds of successive births.'
- c. [Since some one may be disposed to say] 'Grant that there is no fitness [in the Scriptural and legal injunctions, (§ 7. a.)], what have we to do with that?' Therefore he declares [as follows]:

[े] दुःखात्यन्तिनवृत्तेर्मोद्यनाह्यः दुःखयोगः स च पुरुषे न स्वाभाविकः। तथा सित मोद्याय साधनोपदेशस्य श्रीतस्य स्मार्तस्य च विधिरनुष्टानं न घटत इति शेषः। न ह्यग्नेः स्वाभाविकादी-ष्याग्मोद्यः संभवति स्वाभाविकस्य यावदृष्यभा-विनादिति भावः।

[ं] उक्तं चेश्वरगीतायाम्। यद्यात्मा मिलनो ऽस्वच्छो विकारी स्यात्स्वभावतः। निह तस्य भवेन्मुक्तिजैन्मान्तरशतैरपीति॥

^{़ै} भवत्वननुष्ठानं किमेतावतेत्यत स्नाह॥

स्वभावस्थानपायिलादननुष्ठानलक्ष्णमप्रा-माएयम् ॥ ७ ॥

Scripture would be nugatory, if pain were inevitable.

Aph. 8. Since an essential nature is imperishable, unauthoritativeness, betokened by impracticableness, [would be chargeable against the Scripture, if pain were essential to humanity].

- a. That is to say: since the essential nature of anything is imperishable, i. e., endures as long as the thing itself, it would follow [on the supposition that pain is essential to humanity], that, since Liberation is impossible, the Scripture which enjoins the means for its attainment is a false authority, inasmuch as it is impracticable [in its injunctions. And this is out of the question; Scripture being assumed, here, as in all the others of the six systems, to be an exact measure of truth].
 - b. But then [some one may say], let it be an injunction [to use means for the attainment of an unattainable object], on the mere strength of Scripture; ² [and, since Scripture is an unquestionable authority, we may be excused from asking or answering the question, why the injunction is given]. To this he replies [as follows]:

नाशक्यापदेशविधिरुपदिष्टेऽप्यनुपदेशः ॥ ९ ॥

[े] स्वभावस्थानपायिताद्यावद्व्यभाविताने।-श्रासंभवेन तत्साधनापदेशश्रुतेरननुष्ठानलश्रणम-प्रामाएयं स्थादित्यर्थः॥

[े] ननु श्रुतिबलादेवानुष्ठानं स्यात्तचाह ॥

An impracticable injunction is no rule. Aph. 9. There is no rule, where something impossible is enjoined: though it be enjoined, it is no injunction.

- a. There can be no fitness, or propriety, in an injunction with a view to an impossible fruit; seeing that, though something be enjoined, or ordered [to be effected] by means that are impracticable, this is no injunction at all, but only the semblance of an injunction; because it stands to reason, that not even the Veda can make one see sense in an absurdity: such is the meaning.
 - b. Here he comes upon a doubt:2

मुक्कपटवडीजवचेत् ॥ १० ॥

A doubt whether the essential be not removable.

Aph. 10. If [some one says] as in the case of white cloth, or of a seed, [something essential may be not irremovable, then he will find his answer in the next aphorism].

a. But then [the doubter is supposed to argue], the destruction even of what is essential [in spite of what is stated under § 7] is seen; as, for example, the essential whiteness of white cloth is removed by dyeing, and the essential power of germination in a seed is removed by fire. Therefore, according to the analogy of the white cloth and the seed, it is possible that there should be the removal of the bondage of the soul, even though it were essential. So, too, there may be [without any impropriety] the enjoinment of the means thereof. Well, if [any one argues thus], such is the meaning 1 [of the aphorism, to which he proceeds to reply].

[े] अशकाय फलायापदेशस्य विधिरनुष्ठानं न संभवति यत उपदिष्टे विहितेऽषशक्यापायेनो-पदेश एव न भवति किं तूपदेशाभास एव बाधि-तमधें वेदाेऽपि न बाध्यतीति न्यायादित्यर्थः॥

b. He declares [the real state of the case, with reference to the doubt just raised]:

शस्त्रुद्भवानुद्भवाभ्यां नाशक्योपदेशः॥ ११॥

Decision that an essential property may be hidden, but not removed. Aph. 11. Since both perceptibleness and [subsequent] non-perceptibleness may belong to some power [which is indestructible], it is not something impracticable that is enjoined, [when one is directed to render some indestructible power imperceptible].

a. In regard even to the two examples above-mentioned [§ 10], people do not give an injunction for [the positive destruction of] something essential, which is indestructible [§ 8]. Why [do we say this]? Because, in these two [ं] ननु स्वाभाविकस्यायपाया दृश्यते यथा शुक्क-पटस्य स्वाभाविकं शाक्त्रं रागेणापनीयते यथा च बीजस्य स्वाभाविक्यङ्कुरशिक्तरिगननापनीयते । स्रतः शुक्कपटवडीजवच स्वाभाविकस्यापि बन्ध-स्यापायः पुरुषे संभवतीति । तद्ददेव तत्साधना-पदेशः स्यादिति चेदित्यर्षः ॥

instances of the perceptibleness and non-perceptibleness of a power [the powers, namely, of appearing white and of germinating (see § 10. a.)], there are merely the manifestation and [afterwards] the hiding of the whiteness, &c., but not the remoral of the whiteness, or of the power of germination; because, that is to say, the whiteness of the dyed cloth and the germinating power of the roasted seed can again be brought out by the processes of the bleacher, &c., [in the case of the dyed cloth], and by the will of the Yogi, [the possessor of supernatural powers, in the case of the roasted seed], &c.¹

b. Having thus disproved the notion that bondage is essential [to man], wishing to disprove also the notion that it is the result of some [adherent] cause, he rejects the [various supposable] causes, viz., Time, &c.:²

[ं] ज़क्तदृष्टान्तयारपशकाय स्वाभाविकायाप-देशो लोकानां न भवति । कुतः । शक्त्युद्भवा-नुद्भवाभ्यां दृष्टान्तद्वये शुक्कत्वादेराविभावितरोभा-वावेव भवतो न तु शिक्त्यस्याद्भुरशक्तेश्वापायः । रजकादिव्यापारैयांगिसंकल्पादिभिश्व रक्तपटभृष्ट-वीजयाः पुनः शिक्त्यस्याङ्कुरशक्तेश्वाविभावादिति भावः ॥

न कालयागता व्यापिना नित्यस्य सर्वसं-बन्धात्॥ १२॥

Time, which applies to all, cannot be the cause of the bondaye of a part.

Aph. 12. Not from connexion with time [does bondage befall the soul]; because this, all-pervading and eternal, is [eternally] associated with all, [and not with those alone who are in bondage].

a. The bondage of man is not caused by time; because [if that were the case,] there could be no such separation as that of the liberated and unliberated; because time, which applies to everything, and is eternal, is at all times associated with all men,¹ [and must, therefore, bring all into bondage, if any].

न देशयोगतोऽयस्मात् ॥ १३ ॥

Place, for the same reason, cannot be the Aph. 13. Nor [does bondage arise] from connexion with place, either, for the same [reason].

a. That is to say: bondage does not arise from connexion with place. Why? 'For the same reason,' i.e., for that stated in the preceding aphorism, viz., that, since it [viz., place] is connected with all men, whether liberated

[े]न कालनिमित्तकः पुरुषस्य बन्धो व्यापिनो नित्यस्य कालस्य सर्वैः पुरुषेः सर्वकालावच्छेदेन संबन्धान्मुक्तामुक्तव्यवस्थानुपपत्तेः॥ or not liberated, bondage would [in that case] befall the liberated, also.1

नावस्थातो देहधर्मनात्तस्याः॥ १४॥

The soul is not kept in bondage by its being conditioned. Aph. 14. Nor [does the bondage of the soul arise] from its being conditioned [by its standing among circumstances that clog it by limiting it]; because that is the fact in regard to [not the soul, but] the body.

- a. By 'condition' we mean the being in the shape of a sort of association. The bondage [of the soul] does not arise from that; because that is the property of the body [and not of the soul]; because, that is to say, bondage might befall even the liberated [which is impossible], if that which is the fact in regard to another could occasion the bondage of one quite different.²
- b. But then [some one might say], let this conditioned state belong to the soul. On this point [to prevent mistakes], he declares:

[े] देशयोगतोऽपि न बन्धः। कुतः। अस्मा-त्यूर्वसूत्रोक्तान्मुक्तामुक्तसर्वपुरुषसंबन्धान्मुक्तस्यापि बन्धापन्नेरित्यर्थः॥

[ै] अवस्था संघातिवशेष ह्पता। ततो न बन्ध-स्तस्या देहधर्मनादन्यधर्मस्य साक्षादन्य बन्धकने मुक्तस्यापि बन्धापन्नेरिति भावः॥

³ ननु पुरुषस्यैवावस्था स्यात्तनाह ॥

ऋसङ्गाऽयं पुरुष इति॥ १५॥

Aph. 15. Because this soul is [unassociated with any conditions or circumstances that could serve as its bonds, it is] absolute.

a. The word iti here shows that it [i.e., the assertion conveyed in the aphorism] is a reason; the construction with the preceding aphorism being this, that, since the soul is unassociated, it belongs only to the body to be conditioned.

न कर्मणान्यधर्मतादतिप्रमक्तेश्व ॥ १६ ॥

The fruit of works belongs not to the soul.

Aph. 16. Nor [does the bondage of soul arise] from any work; because [works are] the property of another [viz., the mind], and because it [the bondage] would be eternal, if the case were as you imagine].

े इतिर्हेती पुरुषस्यासङ्गलादवस्थाया देहमा-चधर्मलमिति पूर्वसूचेणान्वयः॥

² The commentator Aniruddha omits the final word, \(\frac{1}{2}\). Ed.

Colebrooke, on various occasions, represents one or other of these terms by 'wrest,' 'straining a rule,' 'room for misconstruction,' &c. As technicalities, they generally signify 'illegitimately extended application' of a canon, notion, or the like. Ed.

- a. That is to say: moreover, the bondage of the soul does not arise from any work, whether enjoined or forbidden; because works are the property of another, i.e., not the property of the soul [but of the mind]. And, if, through a property of another, the bondage of one quite distinct could take place, then bondage might befall even the liberated ¹, [through some acts of some one else].
- b. But then [some one may say], this objection does not apply, if we hold that bondage may arise from the acts of the associate² [viz., the mental organ]: so, with allusion to this, he states another reason, 'and because it would be eternal,' i.e., because bondage, in the shape of connexion with pain, would occur [where it does not,] even in such cases as the universal dissolution³ [of the phenomenal universe, including the mental organ, but not the soul].

A doubt whether the bondage, also, belongs not to something else than the souls

c. But then [some one may say], if that be the case, then let the bondage, too, in the shape of connexion with pain, belong [not to the soul, but] to the mind alone, in accordance with the principle that it have the same locus as the works [to which it is due]; and, since it is an established point that pain is an affection of the mind, why is bondage [i.e., connexion with pain] assumed of the soul, also? With reference to this doubt, he declares [as follows]:

विचित्रभागानुपपितरन्यधर्मते॥ १९॥

Why it is to the soul that the bondage must Aph. 17. If it were the property of any other, then there could not be diverse experience.

a. If bondage, in the shape of connexion with pain, were the property of another, i.e., a property of the mind, there could be no such thing as diverse experience; there could be no such different experience as one man's experiencing pain, and another man's not: [for, it must be remembered, it is not in point of mind, but of soul, that men are held, by Kapila, to be numerically different]. Therefore, it must be admitted that pain is connected with the soul, also. And this [pain that belongs to the soul] is in the shape merely of a reflexion of the pain [that attaches to its attendant organism]; and this reflexion is of its own attendant [organism] only; so that there is no undue result [deducible from our theory].

[े] नन्वेवं दुःखयोगरूपोऽपि बन्धः कर्मसामाना-धिकरएयानुरोधेन चित्तस्यैवस्तु दुःखस्य चित्तधर्म-तायाः सिज्जनाच किमधं पुरुषस्यापि कल्यते बन्ध इत्यागङ्कायामाह ॥

b. He rejects also the notion that Nature (prakriti) is directly the cause of bondage: 1

प्रकृतिनिबन्धनाचेच तस्या ऋषि पारतन्त्र्यम्॥१८॥

Nature is not the immediate cause of the soul's bondage arises] from Nature, as its soul's hondage.

Aph. 18. If [you say that the soul's bondage arises] from Nature, as its cause, [then I say] 'no;' [because] that, also, is a dependent thing.

a. But then [some one may say], let bondage result from Nature, as its cause. If you say so, I say 'no;' because that, also, i.e., Nature, also, is dependent on the conjunction which is to be mentioned in the next aphorism; because, if it [Nature] were to occasion bondage, even without that [conjunction which is next to be mentioned], then bondage would occur even in such cases as the universal dissolution, [when soul is altogether disconnected from the phenomenal].

- b. If the reading [in the aphorism] be nibandhaná i [in the 1st case, and not in the 5th], then the construction will be as follows: 'If [you say that] the bondage is caused by Nature,' &c.²
- c. Therefore, since Nature can be the cause of bondage, only as depending on something else [i.e., on the conjunction to be mentioned in the next aphorism], through this very sort of conjunction [it follows that] the bondage is reflexional, like the heat of water due to the conjunction of fire; [water being held to be essentially cold, and to seem hot only while the heat continues in conjunction with it].
- d. He establishes his own tenet, while engaged on this point, in the very middle [of his criticisms on erroneous notions in regard to the matter; for there are more to come]:

न नित्यशुड्डबुड्डमुक्तस्वभावस्य तयोगस्तयोः गादृते ॥ १९ ॥

- ै निबन्धना चेदिति पाठे प्रकृतिनिबन्धना बद्धता चेदिति योज्यम्॥

- ⁵ Here follows, in the first edition, the particle $\overline{\mathbf{d}}$, for which no authority has been discovered. The word translating it I have retained, but bracketed. Ed.

What really is the relation of its bondage to the soul.

Aph. 19. [But] not without the conjunction thereof [i.e., of Nature] is there the connexion of that [i.e., of pain] with that [viz., the soul,] which is ever essentially a pure and free intelligence.

a. Therefore, without the conjunction thereof, i.e., without the conjunction of Nature, there is not, to the soul, any connexion with that, i.e., any connexion with bondage; but, moreover, just through that [connexion with Nature] does bondage take place.²

b. In order to suggest the fact that the bondage [of the soul] is reflexional [and not inherent in it, either essentially or adventitiously], he makes use of the indirect expression with a double negative, ['not without']. For, if bondage were produced by the conjunction [of the soul] with Nature, as colour is produced by heating [in the case of a jar of black clay, which becomes red in the baking, then, just like that, it would continue even after disjunction therefrom; [as the red colour remains in the jar, after the fire of the brick-kiln has been extinguished, whereas the red colour occasioned in a crystal vase by a China-rose, while it occurs not without the China-rose, ceases, on the removal thereof]. Hence, as bondage ceases, on the disjunction [of the soul] from Nature, the bondage is merely reflexional, and neither essential [§ 5. b.] nor adventitious³ [§ 11. 6.].

[ै] तस्मान्नयोगादृते प्रकृतिसंयागं विना न पुरु-षस्य तयोगा बन्धसंपर्काऽस्ति । ऋपि तु तत एव बन्धः ॥

^³ बन्धस्यापाधिकत्वलाभाय नञ्चयेन वक्रोक्तिः।

c. In order that there may not be such an error as that of the Vaiseshikas, viz., [the opinion that there is] an absolutely real conjunction [of the soul] with pain, he says 'which is ever,' &c. [§ 19]. That is to say: as the connexion of colour with essentially pure crystal does not take place without the conjunction of the China-rose [the hue of which, seen athwart the crystal, seems to belong to the crystal], just so the connexion of pain with the soul, ever essentially pure, &c., could not take place without the conjunction of some accidental associate; that is to say, pain, &c., cannot arise spontaneously, [any more than a red colour can arise spontaneously in the crystal which is essentially pure].

d. This has been declared, in the Saura, as follows: 'As the pure crystal is regarded, by people, as red, in consequence of the proximity of something [as a China-rose]

यदि हि बन्धः पाकजह्मवत्मकृतिसंयोगजन्यः स्या-त्रदा तद्देव तद्दियोगेऽप्यनुवर्तेत । अतः प्रकृति-वियोगे बन्धाभावादापाधिक एव बन्धा न तु स्वा-भाविको नैमित्तिको वेति ॥

- e. In that [aphorism, 19], the perpetual purity means the being ever devoid of merit and demerit; the perpetual intelligence means the consisting of uninterrupted thought; and the perpetual liberatedness means the being ever dissociated from real pain: that is to say, the connexion with pain in the shape of a reflexion is not a real bondage,² [any more than the reflexion of the China-rose is a real stain in the crystal].
- f. And so the maker of the aphorism means, that the cause of its bondage is just a particular conjunction [§ 19.c.]. And now enough as to that point.
- g. Now he rejects [§18.d.] certain causes of [the soul's] bondage, preferred by others:

The Vedántic tenet on this point disputed.

Aph. 20. Not from Ignorance, too, [does the soul's bondage arise]; because that which is not a reality is not adapted to binding.

- a. The word 'too' is used with reference to the previously mentioned 'Time,' &c.,¹ [§ 12, which had been rejected, as causes of the bondage, antecedently to the statement, in §19, of the received cause].
- b. Neither, too, does [the soul's] union with bondage result directly from 'Ignorance,' as is the opinion of those who assert non-duality [or the existence of no reality save one (see Vedánta-sára, § 20. b.)]; because, since their 'Ignorance' is not a real thing, it is not fit to bind; because, that is to say, the binding of any one with a rope merely dreamt of was never witnessed.²
- c. But, if 'Ignorance' be a reality [as some assert], then he declares [as follows]:

वस्तुते सिद्धान्तहानिः॥ २१॥

The Vedántí cannot evade the objection, without stultifying himself.

Aph. 21. If it ['Ignorance'] be [asserted, by you, to be] a reality, then there is an abandonment of the [Vedántic] tenet, [by you who profess to follow the Vedánta].

- a. That is to say: and, if you agree that 'Ignorance' is a reality, then you abandon your own implied dogma [see Nyáya Aphorisms I., § 31] of the unreality of 'Ignorance;' [and so you stultify yourself].
 - b. He states another objection:2

विजातीयद्वेतापत्तिश्व॥ २२॥

The Vedántí cannot evade the objection, without conceding a duality.

Aph. 22. And [if you assume 'Ignorance' to be a reality, then] there would be a duality, through [there being] something of a different kind [from soul; which you asserters of non-duality cannot contemplate allowing].

a. That is to say: if 'Ignorance' is real and without a beginning, then it is eternal, and coordinate with Soul: if [therefore] it be not soul, then there is a duality, through [there being] something of a different kind [from soul; and this the Vedántís cannot intend to establish]; because these followers of the Vedánta, asserting non-duality, hold that there is neither a duality through there being something of the same kind [with soul], nor through there being something of a different kind.³

The Vedántí must not allege that 'Ignorance' is at once real and unreal. Aph. 23. If [the Vedántí alleges, regarding 'Ignorance,' that] it is in the shape of both these opposites, [then we shall say 'no,' for the reason to be assigned in the next aphorism].

a. The meaning is: if [the Vedántí says that] 'Ignorance' is not real,—else there would be a duality through [there being] something of a different kind [from soul, which a follower of the Vedánta cannot allow],—and, moreover, it is not unreal, because we experience its effects; but it is in the shape of something at once real and unreal, [like Plato's $\delta \nu \ \kappa a \iota \ \mu \dot{\eta} \ \breve{o} \nu$: (see Vedánta-sára, § 21)].

Aph. 24. [To the suggestion that 'Ignorance' is at once real and unreal, we say] 'no;' because no such thing is known [as is at once real and unreal.]

a. That is to say: it is not right to say that 'Ignorance' is at once real and unreal. The reason of this he states in the words 'because no such thing,' &c.; because any such thing as is at once real and unreal is not known.

b. Again he ponders a doubt:2

A question whether the Vedanti is bound to aroid self-contradiction Aph. 25. [Possibly the Vedántí may remonstrate] 'We are not asserters of any Six Categories, like the Vaiseshikas and others.'

a. "We are not asserters of a definite set of categories [like the Vaiśeshikas, who arrange all things under six heads, and the Naiyúyikas, who arrange them under sixteen]. Therefore, we hold that there is such a thing, unknown though it be [to people in general], as 'Ignorance' which is at once real and unreal, or [if you prefer it], which differs at once from the real and the unreal [see

- b. By the expression [in the aphorism] 'and others' are meant the Naiyáyikas; for the Naiyáyika is an asserter of sixteen categories ² [see Nyáya Aphorisms, I., § 1].

b. Certain heretics [deniers of the authority of the Vedas] assert that there exist external objects of momentary duration [individually; each being, however, replaced by its facsimile the next instant, so that the uninterrupted series of productions becomes something equivalent to continuous duration], and that by the influence of these the bondage of the soul [is occasioned]. This he objects to, [as follows]:

² Vásaná, a term which Dr. Ballantyne has rendered variously, in divers passages of the present work, and also elsewhere. It is well defined, in Prof. Benfey's Sanskrit-English Dictionary: 'An impression remaining unconsciously in the mind, from past actions, etc., and, by the resulting merit or demerit, producing pleasure or pain.' Ed.

The heretical theory of a succession of momentary objects from all eternity, as causing the soul's bondage, rejected. Aph. 27. [The bondage] thereof, moreover, is not caused by any influence of objects from all eternity.

a. 'Thereof,' i.e., of the soul. An eternal influence of objects, an influence of objects the effect of which, in the shape of a continued stream, has had no commencement,—not by this, either, is it possible that the bondage [of the soul] has been occasioned: such is the meaning.²

b. He states the reason of this [impossibility]: ५०१)१० न बाह्याभ्यन्तरयोहपरज्योपरज्ञकभावाऽपि देशव्य-वधानात्सुग्नस्थपाटिलपुत्रस्थयोरिव ॥ २८॥

¹ Instead of -निमित्तकः, Aniruddha has the substantially equivalent -निमितः. Ed.

⁴ Dr. Ballantyne had, most probably by mere oversight, the unauthorized alguette, which I have corrected. The reading 3U(32), here followed, is, perhaps, that of Aniruddha. 3U- 3320 is the form of the word recognized by Vijnána; and I know of no manuscript warrant for the alteration of it seen in the following page, I,—an extract from his commentary. It is, further, a regular derivative, which the other is not, if it is not even unjustified by grammatical prescription. Ed.

⁶ Aniruddha has -मेद्॰, 'division,' in place of -व्यवधान॰, 'separation.' Ed.

A thing cannot act where it is not.

Aple. 28. Also [in my opinion, as well as in yours, apparently], between the external and the internal there is influenced and influencer: because not the relation of influenced and influencer; because there is a local separation; as there is between him that stays at Srughna and him that stays at Pátaliputra.

- a. In the opinion of these [persons whose theory we are at present objecting to], the soul is circumscribed, residing entirely within the body; and that which is thus within cannot stand in the relation of the influenced and the influencer, as regards an external object. Why? Because they are separated in regard to place; like two persons the one of whom remains in Srughna and the other in Páṭaliputra: such is the meaning. Because the affection which we call 'influence' (vásaná) is seen only when there is conjunction, such as that of madder and the cloth to which it gives its colour], or that of flowers and the flower-basket [to which they impart their odour.]
- b. By the word 'also' the absence of conjunction [between the soul and objects (see § 15)], &c., which he himself holds, is connected² [with the matter of the present aphorism].

दयारेकदेशलब्धापरागाच व्यवस्था॥ २९॥

On the heretical view, the free soul would be equally liable to bondage. Aph. 29. [It is impossible that the soul's bondage should arise] from an influence received in the same place [where the object is; because, in that case], there would be no distinction between the two, [the bond and the free].

a. To complete the sense, we must supply as follows: 'It is impossible that the bondage should arise from an influence received in one and the same place with the object.' Why? Because there would be no distinction between the two, the soul bound and the soul free; because bondage would [in that case] befall the liberated soul, also; [the free soul, according to this hypothesis, being just as likely to come across objects as any other]: such is the meaning.³

a. That is to say, [the heretic may argue]: 'But then, granting that they [the free soul and the bound] are alike in respect of their coming into contact with objects, when they become conjoined with them in one and the same locality; yet the reception of the influence may result merely from the force of the unscen, [i.e., from the merit and demerit of this or that soul; the soul that is liberated alike from merit and demerit being able to encounter, with impunity, the object that would enchain one differently circumstanced]': if ' [this be urged, then we look forward].

Aph. 31. They cannot stand in the relation of deserver and bestower, since the two do not belong to one

a. Since, in thy opinion, the agent and the patient are distinct, and do not belong to the same time [believing, as thou heretically dost, not only that objects (see § 26. b.) momentarily perish and are replaced, but that the duration of souls, also, is of a like description], there is positively no such relation [between the soul at one time and its successor at another] as that of deserver and bestower [or transmitter of its merits or demerits]; because it is impossible that there should be an influence of objects [§ 27] taking effect on a patient [say, the soul of to-day], occasioned by the 'unseen' [merit or demerit] belonging to an agent [say, the soul of yesterday, which, on the hypothesis in question, is a numerically different individual]: such is the meaning.

Whether merit may, or may not, be imputed.

Aph. 32. If [the heretic suggests that] the case is like that of the ceremonies in regard to a son, [then he will find his reply by looking forward].

a. But then [the heretic, admitting the principle that [े]तव मते कर्तृभोक्तोर्भेदादेककालासंबन्धाच नैवोपकार्यापकारकभावे नहि कर्तृनिष्ठादृष्टेन भो-कृनिष्ठा विषयोपरागः संभवतीत्यर्थः॥

the merit or demerit of an act belongs entirely to the agent, may urge that], as the son is benefited by ceremonies in regard to a son, such as that [ceremony (see Colebrooke's 'Hindú Law,' Vol. III., p. 104) celebrated] in anticipation of conception, which [no doubt] belongs to the father [who performs the ceremonies, to propitiate the gods], in like manner there may be an influence of objects on the experiencer [say, the soul of to-day], through the 'unseen' [merit or demerit] that belongs even to a different subject [say, the soul of yesterday]: such is the meaning¹ [of the heretic].

b. He refutes this, by showing that the illustration is not a fact:²

नास्ति हितच स्थिर एक ञ्चात्मा ये। गभाधानादि-ना संस्क्रियेत भा 33 ॥

This will not help the heretic's a gument.

Aph. 33. [Your illustration proves nothing;] for, in that case, there is no one permanent soul which could be consecrated by the ceremonies in anticipation of conception, &c.

a. 'In that case,' i.e., on thy theory, too, the benefit of the son, by [means of the performance of] the ceremonies in anticipation of conception, &c., could not take place; 'for,' i.e., because, on that theory, there is not one [self-identical] soul, continuing from the [time of] conception to birth, which could be consecrated [by the ceremonies in question], so as to be a fit subject for the duties that pertain to the time subsequent to birth [such as the investiture with the sacred thread, for which the young Bráhman would not be a fit subject, if the ceremonies in anticipation of his conception had been omitted]: and thus your illustration is not a real one, [on your own theory: it is not a thing that you can assert as a fact].

b. And, according to my theory, also, your illustration is not a fact; seeing that it is possible that the benefit to the son should arise from the 'unseen' [merit] deposited in the son by means of the ceremony regarding the son: for it is an implied tenet [of my school], that it [the soul] is permanent [in its self-identity]; and there is the injunction' [of Manu, (Ch. II., v. 26), with regard to the ceremonies in question, which proceeds on the same grounds].

c. Some other heretic may encounter us, on the strength of [the argument here next stated, viz.,] 'But then, since bondage, also, [like everything else] is momentary, let this bondage have nothing determinate for its cause, or nothing at all for its cause,' [which view of matters is propounded in the next aphorism]:

स्थिरकार्यासिडेः श्रिणकलम्॥ ३४॥

Whether bondage may not be momentary, and so require no cause. Aph. 34. Since there is no such thing as a permanent result [on the heretical view], the momentariness [of bondage, also, is to be admitted].

- a. 'Of bondage': this must be supplied, [to complete the aphorism].2
- b. And thus the point relied on is, that it [i.e., bondage] have no cause at all. And so this is the application [of the argument, viz.]:
 - (1) Bondage, &c., is momentary;
 - (2) Because it exists,
 - (3) [Everything that exists is momentary,] as the apex of the lamp-flame, or the like.³

c. And [continues the heretic,] this [reason, viz., 'existence'] does not extend unduly 1 [as you may object,] to the case of a jar, or the like; because that, also [in my opinion], is like the subject in dispute, [in being momentary]. This [in fact] is precisely what is asserted in the expression, 'since there is no such thing as a permanent result' 2 [§34].

d. He objects [to this heretical view]:

न प्रत्यभिज्ञाबाधात्॥ ३५ ॥

The fact of recognition proves that things are not momentary. Aph. 35. No, [things are not momentary in their duration]; for the absurdity of this is proved by recognition

- a. That is to say: nothing is momentary; because the absurdity of its being momentary follows from the opposite argument [to that under § 34. b.], taken from such facts of recognition as, 'what I saw, that same do I touch,' [an argument which may be stated as follows], viz.:
 - (1) Bondage, &c., is permanent;
 - (2) Because it exists,

ैन च घटादे। व्यभिचारस्तस्यापि पश्चसमतात्। एतदेवोक्तं स्थिरकार्यासिद्वेरित्यनेन॥

¹ Vyabhichára is the expression here paraphrased. In this work and others, the translator has given it many meanings; and so has Colebrooke, who renders it, in various contexts, by 'contradiction,' 'derogation,' 'failure,' 'impossibility,' 'unoperativeness,' &c. As a logical technicality, it denotes the presentation of the reason, or middle term, unaccompanied by the major term. Ed.

(3) [Everything that exists is permanent,] as a jar, or the like.¹

श्रुतिन्यायविरोधाच ॥ ३६ ॥

That things are momentary is contradicted by Scripture and reasoning. Aph. 36. And [things are not momentary;] because this is contradicted by Scripture and by reasoning.

a. That is to say: nothing is momentary; because the general principle, that the whole world, consisting of effects and causes, is momentary, is contradicted by such texts as this, viz., '[All] this, O ingenuous one, was antecedently existing,' and by such Scriptural and other arguments as this, viz., 'How should what exists proceed from the non-existent?'

दृष्टान्तासिङ्घश्च ॥ ३७ ॥

The heretic's illustration is not a truth. Aph. 37. And [we reject the argument of this heretic;] because his instance is not a fact.

[ं] न कस्यापि श्विणकतं यदद्राशं तदेवाहं स्पृशा-मीत्यादिप्रत्यभिज्ञानुगृहीतेन बन्धाधिकं स्थिरं स-स्वाह्वटादिवदिति प्रत्यनुमानेन श्विणकत्वस्य बाधा-दित्यर्थः॥

a. That is to say: the general principle of the momentariness [of all things] is denied; because this momentary character does not [in fact] belong to the apex of the lamp-flame, &c., the instance [on which thou, heretic, dost ground thy generalization, (§ 34. b.)]. Moreover, thou quite errest in regard to momentariness, in that instance, from not taking account of the minute and numerous instants [really included in a duration which seems to thee momentary]: such is the import.

If things were momentary, there could be no relation of cause and effect. b. Moreover, if the momentary duration, &c., [of things] be asserted, then there can be no such thing as the relation of cause and effect, in the case of the earth and the jar, and the like.

And you must not say that there is no such thing as that [relation of cause and effect]; because it is proved to be a reality by the fact that, otherwise, there would be no such thing as the efforts of him who desires an effect, [and who, therefore, sets in operation the causes adapted to its production]. With reference to this, he declares [as follows]:

युगपज्जायमानयार्न कार्यकारणभावः ॥ ३६ ॥

े दृष्टान्ते दीपशिखादे। स्रिशिकातस्यासिडेर्न स्र-शिकातानुमानमित्यर्थः। किं च मूस्र्मानेकस्रणा-नाकलनेन स्रिशिकात्वभ्रम एव तच तवेति भावः॥ वे किं च स्रिशिकात्ववादे मृह्यटादिस्थले कार्यका-रणभावा नापपद्यते। न च नास्त्येव स इति वाच्यं कार्यार्थनः प्रवृत्त्यन्ययानुपपत्त्या तिसाडे-रित्यभिप्रत्याह॥ The causal relation is not between things that arise simultaneously.

Aph. 38. It is not between two things coming simultaneously into existence, that the relation of cause and effect exists.

a. Let us ask, does the relation of product and [material] cause exist between the earth and the jar, as simultaneously coming into [their supposed momentary] existence, or as successive? Not the first; because there is nothing to lead to such an inference, and because we should not [in that case] find the man, who wants a jar, operating with earth, &c., [with a view to the jar's subsequent production]. Neither is it the last; in regard to which he declares [as follows]:¹

पूर्वापाय उत्तरायागात् ॥ ३० ॥

A product cannot surowe its substantial cause. Aph. 39. Because, when the antecedent departs, the consequent is unfit [to arise, and survive it].

a. The relation of cause and effect is, further, inconsistent with the theory of the momentary duration of things; because, at the time when the antecedent, i.e., the cause, departs, the consequent, i.e., the product, is 'unfit,' i.e., is not competent to arise; because, that is to say, a product is cognized only by its inhering in [and being substantially identical with, however formally different from,] its substantial cause, [and is incapable, therefore, of surviving it].

b. With reference to this same [topic, viz., the] substantial cause, he mentions another [the converse] objection² [to the theory of the momentary duration of things]:

तङ्गावे तदयागादुभयव्यभिचारादिप न ॥ ४० ॥

The coexistence of substance and product is impossible, if things be momentary. Aph. 40. Moreover, not [on the theory of the momentary duration of things, can there be such a relation as that of cause and effect]; because, while the one [the antecedent] exists, the other [the consequent] is incompatible, because the two keep always asunder.³

a. To complete [the aphorism], we must say, 'moreover, [on the theory objected to], there can be no such relation as that of cause and effect; because, at the time when the antecedent exists, the consequent cannot coexist with it, the two being mutually exclusive.' The two suggesters of the relation of cause and effect, in product and sub

b. But then, [the heretic may say, do not let the coexistence of substance and product be insisted upon, as indispensable to the causal relation between the two, but] 'let the nature of a cause belong to the substantial cause, ¹ I have inserted the words 'in product and substance.' Ed.

³ 'Antecedent and consequent' renders kramika, translated 'successive' in Aph. 38, a, at p. 41, supra. Ed.

as it belongs to the instrumental cause, in respect merely of its antecedence.' To this he replies:

पूर्वभावमाचे न नियमः ॥ ४१ ॥

Antecedence to the product does not distinguish the Matter from the Instrument.

Aph. 41. If there were merely antecedence, then there would be no determination [of a substantial or material cause, as distinguished from an instrumental cause].

a. And it could not be determined that this was the substance [of this or that product], on the granting of nothing more than its antecedence [to the product]; because antecedence constitutes no distinction between it and the instrumental causes; for, [as we need scarcely remind you], that there is a distinction between instrumental and substantial causes, the whole world is agreed: such is the meaning.²

The question whether anything exists besides Thought

b. Other heretics say: 'Since nothing [really] exists, except Thought, neither does Bondage; just as the things of a dream [have no real exist-

ै पूर्वभावमात्राभ्युपगमे चेदमेवापादानमिति नियमा न स्यान्तिमित्तकारणानामि पूर्वभावा-विशेषादीदृगेव हि निमित्तापादानयार्विभागः सर्वलाकसिङ्क इत्यर्थः॥ ence]. Therefore it has no cause; for it is absolutely false.' He rejects the opinion of these¹ [heretics]:

न विज्ञानमाचं बाह्यप्रतीतः॥ ४२॥

We have the evidence of Intuition for the External, as well as for the Internal.

Aph. 42. Not Thought alone exists; because there is the intuition of the external.

- a. That is to say: the reality is not Thought alone; because external objects, also, are proved to exist, just as Thought is, by intuition.²
- b. But then [these heretics may rejoin], 'From the example of intuitive perception in dreams [see Butler's 'Analogy,' Part I., Ch. I.], we find this [your supposed evidence of objective reality] to exist, even in the absence of objects!' To this he replies:

तदभावे तदभावाच्छ्रन्यं तिहै॥ ४३॥

The denial of the external amounts to Nihilism.

Aph. 43. Then, since, if the one does not exist, the other does not exist, there is a void, [i.e., nothing exists at all].

- े अपरे नास्तिका आहुः। विज्ञानातिरिक्तव-स्त्रभावेन बन्धोऽपि स्त्रप्रपदार्थवत्। अतोऽत्यन्त-मिथ्यात्वेन न तच कारणमस्तीति तन्मतमपा-करोति॥

- ै ननु स्वप्नप्रतीतिदृष्टान्तेन विषयाभावेऽपि तदुपपन्निरिति। तचाह॥

- a. That is to say: if external things do not exist, then a mere void offers itself. Why? Because, if the external does not exist, then thought does not exist; for it is intuition that proves the objective: and, if the intuition of the external did not establish the objective, then the intuition of thought, also, would not establish [the existence of] thought.
- b. 'Then let the reality be a mere void; and, therefore, the searching for the cause of Bondage is unfitting, just because a roid is all:' with such a proposal [as recorded in the next aphorism] does [some one who may claim the title of] the very crest-gem of the heretics rise up in opposition:²

शून्यं तत्वं भावा विनश्यति वस्तुधर्मतादिना-शस्य ॥ ४४ ॥

The heretic goes the length of asserting sheer Nihilism.

Aph. 44. The reality is a void: what is perishes; because to perish is the habit of things.

a. The void alone [says this prince of heretics, or the fact that nothing exists at all] is the reality, [or the only

[ै] अस्तृ तर्हि भून्यमेव तस्वमतश्च बन्धकारणा-न्वेषणमयुक्तं तुन्छतादिति नास्तिकिशरोमणिः प्रत्यवतिष्ठते॥

Since everything that exists perishes, and that which is perishable is false, as is a dream, therefore, as of all things the beginnings and endings are merely nonentities, Bondage, &c., in the midst [of any beginning and ending], has merely a momentary existence,—is phenomenal, and not real. Therefore, who can be bound by what? This [question] is what we rest upon. The reason assigned for the perishableness of whatever exists is, 'because to perish is the habit of things;' because to perish is the very nature of things: but nothing continues, after quitting its own nature; [so that nothing could continue, if it ceased to perish : such is the meaning.

b. He rejects² [this heretical view]:

अपवादमानमबुद्धानाम् ॥ ४५ ॥

Nihilism denied; as the indiscerptible is indestructible.

Aph. 45. This is a mere counterassertion of unintelligent persons.

a. 'Of unintelligent persons,' i.e., of blockheads, this is 'a mere counter-assertion,' i.e., a mere idle counterassertion, that a thing must needs be perishable, because it exists; [and such an assertion is idle,] because things that are not made up of parts, since there is no cause of the destruction of such things, cannot perish.¹

b. [But] what need of many words? It is not the fact, that even products perish; [for] just as, by the cognition that 'the jar is old' [we mean that it has passed from the condition of new to that of old], so, too, by such a cognition as this, that 'the jar has passed away,' it is settled only that the jar, or the like, is in the condition of having passed away.²

c. He states another objection 3 [to the heretical view]:

उभयपश्चसमानश्चेमत्वादयमपि ॥ ४६॥

Nihilism is open to the same objections as both the Momentary and the Ideal theories. Aph. 46. Moreover, this [nihilistic theory is not a right one]; because it has the same fortune as both the views [which were confuted just before].

- ' अबुडानां मूढानामपवादमात्रं भावताद्विना-णित्वमिति मिथ्यापवाद 'एव नाणकारणाभावेन निरवयवद्रव्याणां नाणासंभवात्॥

 - ै दूषणान्तरमाह ॥
- Aniruddha, according to the MSS. which I have seen, reads

- a. This view, moreover [§ 44], is not a good one; because it has the same fortune as, i. e., is open to similar reasons for rejection as, the theory that external things are momentary [§ 26. b.], and as the theory that nothing exists besides Thought [§ 41. b]. The reason for the rejection of the theory that things are momentary in their duration, viz. [as stated in § 35], the fact of recognition, &c., [which is, at least, as little consistent with Nihilism as it is with the momentary duration of things], and the reason for the rejection of the theory that nothing exists besides Thought, viz. [as stated in § 42], the intuition of the external, &c., apply equally here [in the case of Nihilism]: such is the import.
- b. Moreover, as for the opinion which is accepted by these [heretics], viz., 'Let the mere void [of absolute nonentity] be the soul's aim [and summum bonum], since herein consist at once the cessation of pain [which cannot continue, when there is absolutely nothing], and also the means, thereof [since there can be no further means required for the removal of anything, if it be settled that the thing positively does not exist],' this, too, can hardly be: so he declares [as follows]:

[े] श्विणकबाद्यपक्षेण विज्ञानमात्रपक्षेण सह समानश्चेमतात्रुल्यनिरसनहेतुकातादयमपि पक्षेा न सम्यक्। श्विणकपश्चनिरासहेतुः प्रत्यभिज्ञा-दिविज्ञानपश्चनिरासहेतु बाह्यप्रतीत्यादिश्वात्रापि समान इति भावः॥

अपुरुषार्थत्वमुभयथा॥ ४७॥

The soul's aim is not annihilation.

Aph. 47. In neither way [whether as a means, or as an end,] is this [annihilation] the soul's aim.

- a. 'Let the void [of mere nonentity] be the soul's aim, whether as consisting in the cessation of pain, or as presenting the means for the cessation of pain,' [says the heretic. And this cannot be; because the [whole] world agrees, that the aim of the soul consists in the joys, &c., that shall abide in it; that is to say, because [they hold, while] you do not hold, that there is a permanent soul, [(see § 33) in respect of which the liberation or beatification would be possible, or even predicable].'
- b. Now [certain] other things, also, entertained, as causes of [the soul's] bondage, by [imperfectly instructed] believers, remaining over and above those [proposed by unbelievers, and] already rejected, are to be set aside:²

न गतिविशेषात्॥ ४५॥

It is by no movement that the soul gets into bondage. Aph. 48. Not from any kind of motion [such as its entrance into a body, does the soul's bondage result].

े दुःखनिवृत्तिरूपतया दुःखनिवृत्तिसाधनतया वा गून्यस्य पुरुषार्थत्वं स्यात्। तच्च न घटते स्वनि-ष्टतेनेव सुखादीनां लोको पुरुषार्थत्वावगमात्स्थि-रस्य पुरुषस्यानङ्गीकारादित्यर्थः॥

ै इदानीं पूर्वनिरस्ताविश्रष्टान्यास्तिकसंभाव्या-न्यपन्यानि बन्धकार्णानि निरस्यन्ते॥

- a. 'Bondage' [required to complete the aphorism] is understood from the topic 1 [of discussion].
- b. The meaning is, that the soul's bondage, moreover, does not result from any sort of motion, in the shape, for instance, of its entrance into a body.²
 - c. He states a reason for this:3

निष्कियस्य तदसंभवात्॥ ४०॥

What is all-pervading does not change place.

Aph. 49. Because this is impossible for what is inactive, [or, in other words, without motion].

- a. That is to say: because this is impossible, i.e., motion is impossible, in the case of the soul, which is inactive, [because] all-pervading, [and, therefore, incapable of changing its place].
- b. But then [the objector may say], 'Since, in the books of Scripture and of law, we hear of its going and coming into this world and the other world, let soul be [not all-pervading, as you allege, but] merely limited [in its extent]: and to this effect, also, is the text, 'Of the size

मूर्त्तेलाह्वटादिवत्समानधर्मापत्तावपिसङ्घान्तः॥५०॥

Were the soul limited, at might be perishable.

Aph. 50. [We cannot admit that the soul is other than all-pervading; because] by its being limited, since it would be a contradiction to our tenet [of its imperishable-

That is to say: and, if the soul were admitted to be, like a jar, or the like, limited, i.e. circumscribed [in dimension], then, since it would resemble a jar, or the like, in being made up of parts, and [hence] in being perishable, &c., this would be contrary to our settled principle,³ [that the soul is imperishable].

b. He now justifies the text [see § 49. b.] referring to the $motion^{4}$ [of the soul, by showing that the motion is not really of the soul, but of an accessory]:

Since there are such proofs of the soul's unlimitedness, as the declaration that 'It is eternal, omnipresent, permanent," the text's regarding its motion is to be explained as having reference to a movement pertaining [not to the soul, but | to an attendant; for there is the text, 'As the Ether [or space] included in a jar, when the jar is removed, [in this case] the jar may be removed, but not the space; and in like manner is the soul, which is like the sky, [incapable of being moved]';' and because we may conclude that the motion [erroneously supposed to belong to the soul (49. b.), belongs to Nature [see Vedánta Aphorisms, Part I., § 4. l.], from such maxims as this, that 'Nature

b. It has already been denied [§16] that the bondage [of the soul] is occasioned by works, in the shape either of enjoined or of forbidden actions. Now he declares that the bondage, moreover, does not arise from the 'unseen' [merit or demerit] resulting therefrom:

Aph. 52. Nor, moreover, [does the bondage of the soul result from the merit or demerit arising] from works; because these belong not thereto.

a. That is to say: the bondage of the soul does not arise directly from the 'unseen' [merit or demerit] occa-

b. But then [some one may say], 'Let it be that the bondage resulting from the 'unseen,' i.e., the merit [or demerit] even of another, should attach to a different person;' whereupon he declares [as follows]:

अतिप्रसिक्तर्न्यधर्मने ॥ ५३ ॥⁴

Else, bondage might cling even to the emancipated.

Aph. 53. If the case were otherwise [than as I say], then it [the bondage of the soul] might extend unduly, [even to the emancipatea].

a. That is to say: if the case were otherwise, if bondage and its cause were under other conditions [than we have declared them to be], then there might be an undue extension; bondage would befall even the emancipated, ⁵ [for the same reasons as those stated under §16. a.].

[ं] कर्मणादृष्टेनापि साञ्चाच पुरुषस्य बन्धः । कुतः। अतह्वमेलात्पुरुषधर्मलाभावादित्यर्थः॥

[ं] अन्यधर्मते बन्धतत्कारणयोरन्यधर्मते ऽतिप्रस-क्तिर्मुक्तस्यापि बन्धापित्तरित्यर्थः॥

b. What need of so much [prolixity]? He states a general objection why the bondage of soul cannot result from any one or other [of these causes], beginning with its essence [see § 6. b.], and ending with its [supposed] works [see § 16]; inasmuch as it is contrary to Scripture, [that any one of these should be the cause]:

निर्गेणादिश्रुतिविरोधश्रेति ॥ ५४ ॥

A single text of Scripture up-ets, equally, all the heretical notions of the soul's relation to bondage. Aph. 54. And this [opinion, that the bondage of the soul arises from any of these causes alleged by the heretics,] is contrary to such texts as the one that declares it [the soul] to be without qualities: and so much for that point.

- a. And, if the bondage of the soul arose from any one or other of those [supposed causes already treated of,] among which its essential character [§ 6. b.] is the first, this would be contradictory to such texts as, 'Witness, intelligent, alone, and without the [three] qualities [is the soul:'2 such is the meaning."
 - b. The expression 'and so much for that point' means,

[े] किं बहुना । स्वभावादिकमान्तैरत्येन वा केनापि पुरुषस्य बन्धोत्पन्तिर्ने घटते श्रुतिविरोधा-दिति साधारणं बाधकमाह ॥

[ं] स्वभावाद्यन्यतमेन पुरुषस्य बन्धात्यत्ता साधी चेता केवलो निर्गुणश्चेत्यादिश्रुतिविरोधश्चेत्यर्थः॥ that the investigation of the cause of the bondage [of the soul] here closes.¹

- c. The case, then, stands thus: since [all] other [theories] are overthrown by the declaratory aphorisms, 'There would be no fitness in the enjoining' [see § 7], &c., it is ascertained that the immediate cause of the bondage [of the soul] is just the conjunction of Nature and of the soul.²
- d. But then, in that case, [some one may say], this conjunction of Nature and of the soul [§ 5 t. c.], whether it be essential, or adventitiously caused by Time or something else [§ 5. b.], must occasion the bondage even of the emancipated. Having pondered this doubt, he disposes of it [as follows]:

तद्योगेाऽपविवेकाच समानतम् ॥ ५५ ॥

How the true cause of bondage affects not the emancipated.

Aph. 55. Moreover, the conjunction thereof does not, through non-discrimination, take place [in the case of the emancipated]; nor is there a parity,

- ' तदेवं न स्वभावता बडस्येत्यादिना प्रदर्शकेने-तरप्रतिषेधतः प्रकृतिपुरुषसंयाग एव साक्षाडन्थ-हेतुरवधारितः॥ ^{&#}x27; तद्योगे, the reading which I find in MSS. of Aniruddha, seems to be indefensible. Ed.

[in this respect, between the emancipated and the unemancipated].

a. 'The conjunction thereof,' i.e., the conjunction of Nature and of the soul; this conjunction, moreover, does not take place again 'through non-discrimination,' i.e., through the want of a discrimination [between Nature and soul] in the emancipated, [who do discriminate, and who thus avoid the conjunction which others, failing to discriminate, incur, and thus fall into bondage]: such is the meaning. And thus the emancipated and the bound are not on a level, [under the circumstances stated at § 54. c.]: such is the import.¹

[विपर्ययाद्वन्यः ॥ ५६॥

² These words, a bad reading of the 24th Aphorism of Book III., were pointed out, by me, as having, with the sentence of comment attached to them, no place here; and Dr. Ballantyne, when he republished the Sánkhya Aphorisms in the Bibliotheca Indica, omitted them. Hence the brackets now inserted, and my alteration of the numbering of the Aphorisms throughout the remainder of Book I. Ed.

which is to be got rid of, he declares the means of getting rid of it:¹]

नियतकारणात्तदुच्छित्तिध्वान्तवत् ॥ ५६ ॥

Non-discrimination is removable by discrimination alone. Aph. 56. The removal of it is to be effected by the necessary means, just like darkness.

- a. The necessary means, established throughout the world, in such cases as 'shell-silver' [i.e., a pearl-oyster-shell mistaken for silver], viz., the immediacy of discrimination, by this alone is 'its removal,' i.e., the removal of the non-discrimination [between Nature and soul], to be effected, and not by works, or the like: such is the meaning: just as darkness, the dark, is removed by light alone,² [and by no other means].
- b. 'But then [some one may say], if merely the non-discrimination of Nature and soul be, through the conjunction [of the two, consequent on the want of discrimination], the cause of bondage, and if merely the discrimination of the two be the cause of liberation, then there would be liberation, even while there remained the conceit of [one's possessing] a body, &c.; and this is contrary to Scripture,

प्रधानाविवेकादन्याविवेकस्य तज्ञाने हानम् ॥५९॥

The discrimination of Nature, as other than soul, involves all discrimination. Aph. 57. Since the non-discrimination of other things [from soul] results from the non-discrimination of Nature [from soul], the cessation of this will take place, on the cessation of that

a. By reason of the non-discrimination of Nature from the soul, what non-discrimination of other things there is, such as the non-discrimination of the understanding [as something other than the soul], this necessarily ceases, on the cessation of the non-discrimination of Nature; because, when the non-discrimination of the understanding, for example, [as something other than soul,] does occur, it is based on the non-discrimination [from soul] of that cause to which there is none antecedent [viz., Nature]; since the non-discrimination of an effect [and the 'understanding' is an effect or product of Nature,] is, itself, an effect, 2 [and will, of course, cease, with the cessation of its cause].

- b. The state of the case is this: as, when the soul has been discriminated from the body, it is impossible but that it should be discriminated from the colour and other [properties], the effects of the body, [which is the substantial cause of its own properties]; so, by parity of reasoning, from the departure of the cause, when soul, in its character of unalterableness, &c., has been discriminated from Nature, it is impossible that there should remain a conceit of [the soul's being any of] the products thereof [i. e., of Nature], such as the 'understanding,' and the like, which have the character of being modifications' [of primal Nature, while the soul, on the other hand, is a thing unalterable].
- c. But then [some one may say], 'What proof is there that there is a conceit [entertained by people in general,] of a Nature [or primal principle] different from the conceit of an 'understanding,' &c., [which, you tell us, are products of this supposed first principle]? For all the various conceits [that the soul falls into], such as, 'I am ignorant,' and so on, can be accounted for on the ground simply of an 'understanding,' &c., [without postulating a primal Nature which is to assume the shape of an 'understanding,' &c.]:'

वेकस्य कार्यतयानादिकारणाविवेकमूलकतात्तस्य प्रधानाविवेकहाने सत्यवश्यं हानमित्यर्थः॥

ेयथा शरीरादात्मनि विविक्ते शरीरकार्येषु रूपादिष्वविवेका न संभवति तथा कूटस्थलादि-धर्मेः प्रधानात्पुरुषे विविक्ते तत्कार्येषु परिणामा-दिधर्मकेषु बुद्धादिष्वभिमाना न स्थातुमुत्सहते तुस्यन्यायात्कारणनाशाचेति भावः॥ well, if any one says this, I reply, 'no;' because, unless there were such a thing as Nature, we could not account for such conceits as the following, viz., 'Having died, having died, again, when there is a creation, let me be a denizen of Paradise, and not of hell;' because no products, such as the 'understanding,' when they have perished, can be created anew,¹ [any more than [a gold-bracelet, melted down, can be reproduced, though another like it may be produced from the materials].

The soul's confounding uself with Nature is logically antecedent to its confounding itself with anything else. d. Moreover, it is inadmissible to say that men's conceit of [the identity of themselves with their] 'understanding,' &c., is [the primary cause of the soul's bondage, and is] not preceded by anything; because 'understanding' and the rest [as you will not deny] are effects. Now, while it is to be expected that there should be some predetermining agency to establish a conceit of [ownership in, or of one's identity with,] any effects, it is clear that it is a conceit of [ownership, &c.,] in respect of the cause, and nothing else, that must be the predetermining agency: for we see this in ordinary life; and our theories are bound to conform [deferentially] to experience. For [to explain,] we see, in ordinary life, that the conceit of [the ownership of] the grain, &c., produced by a field, results from the conceit of [the ownership of] the field; and, from the conceit of [the ownership of] gold, the conceit of [the ownership of] the bracelets, or other things, formed of that gold; and, by the removal of these [i.e., the removal of the logically antecedent conceits, that the field, or the gold, is one's property], there is the removal of those, ¹ [i.e., the removal of the conceits that the grain, &c, and that the bracelets, &c., the corresponding products or effects of the field and of the gold, are one's property: and so the soul will cease to confound itself with the 'understanding,' when it ceases to confound itself with Nature, of which the 'understanding' is held to be a product].

[ं] नृनु बुद्धाद्यभिमानातिरिक्ते प्रधानाभिमाने वितं प्रमाणमहमञ्ज इत्याद्यखिलाभिमानानां बुद्धा-दिविषयत्वेनैवोपपत्तेरिति चेन्न मृता मृता पुनः सृष्टा स्वर्गी स्यां मा च नारकीत्याद्यभिमानानां प्रधानविषययतं विनानुपपत्तेरतीतानां बुद्धाद्य-खिलकायाणां पुनः मृष्ट्यभावात्॥

e. [And, if it be supposed that we thus lay ourselves open to the charge of a regressus in infinitum, seeing that, whatever we may assign as the first cause, we may, on our own principles, be asked what was the 'predetermining agency' in regard to it; or if it be supposed that we are chargeable with reasoning in a circle, when we hold that the soul's confounding itself with Nature is the cause of its continuing so to confound itself, and its continuing so to confound itself is, reciprocally, the cause why it confounds itself; we reply, that] there is no occasion to look for any other 'predetermining agency,' in the case of the conceit of [the identity of the soul with] Nature, or in the case of the self-continuance¹ thereof, [i. e., of that error of confounding one's self with Nature]; because [these two are alike] without antecedent, like seed and sprout,² [of which it is needless to ask which is the first; the old puzzle, 'which was first, the acorn, or the oak?' being a frivolous question].

f. But then [some one may say], if we admit the soul's bondage [at one time], and its freedom [at another], and its discrimination [at one time], and its non-discrimination [at another], then this is in contradiction to the assertion [in § 19], that it is 'ever essentially a pure and free intelligence;' and it is in contradiction to such texts as this, viz., 'The absolute truth is this, that neither is there destruction [of the soul], nor production [of it]; nor is it bound, nor is it an effecter [of any work], nor is it desirous of liberation, nor is it, indeed, liberated; [seeing that that cannot desire or obtain liberation, which was never bound].' This [charge of inconsistency] he repels:

The bondage of the soul is merely verbal. Aph. 58. It is merely verbal, and not a reality [this so-called bondage of the soul]; since it [the bondage] resides in the mind, [and not in the soul].

a. That is to say: since bondage, &c., all reside only in the mind [and not in the soul], all this, as regards the soul, is merely verbal, i.e., it is rox et praeterea nuhil; because is is merely a reflexion, like the redness of [pellucid] crystal [when a China-rose is near it], but not a reality, with no false imputation, like the redness of the Chinarose itself. Hence there is no contradiction to what had been said before, [as the objector (under § 57. f.) would insinuate]: such is the state of the case.²

च न निरोधो न चोत्पित्तर्न बडो न च साधकः। न मुमुक्षुर्न वै मुक्त इत्येषा परमार्थतेत्यादिष्युति-विरोधश्रेति तां परिहरति॥

1 Aniruddha has, instead of $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$, $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$, Hence: 'But it is merely verbal, not a reality,' &c. Ed.

ै बन्धादीनां सर्वेषां चित्त एवावस्थानात्तर्त्वं पुरुषे वाङ्गानं शब्दमानं स्फिटिकलाहित्यवन्प्रति-बिस्नमानतान्न तु तत्त्वमनारापितं जवालाहित्य-विद्यर्षः । अता नाक्तिवराध इति भावः॥ Whether Testimony, or Inference, without Perception, might not avail to dissipate the soul's bondage. b. But then, if bondage, &c., as regards the soul, be merely verbal, let them be set aside by hearing [that they are merely verbal], or by argument [establishing that they are so]. Why, in the Scripture and the Law, is there enjoined, as the cause of liberation, a discriminative knowledge [of Soul, as distinguished from Non-soul], going the length of immediate cognition? To this he replies:

युक्तितोऽपि न बाध्यते दिङ्गूढवदपरोस्राटृते॥ ५०॥

The truth must be directly discerned, and not merely accepted on the ground of Testimony, or of Inference.

Aph. 59. Moreover, it [the non-discrimination of Soul from Nature,] is not to be removed by argument; as that of the person perplexed about the points of the compass [is not to be removed] without immediate cognition.

a. By 'argument' we mean thinking. The word 'moreover' is intended to aggregate [or take in, along with 'argument'] 'testimony,' 2 [or verbal authority, which, no more than 'argument,' or inference, can remove the evil, which can be removed by nothing short of direct intuitive perception of the real state of the case].

- b. That is to say: the bondage, &c., of the soul though [granted to be] merely verbal, are not to be removed by merely hearing, or inferring, without immediate cognition, without directly perceiving; just as the contrariety in regard to the [proper] direction, though merely verbal [as resulting from misdirection], in the case of a person who is mistaken as to the points of the compass [and hence as to his own bearings], is not removed by testimony, or by inference, without immediate cognition, i. e., without [his] directly perceiving [how the points of the compass really lie, to which immediate perception testimony, or inference, may conduce, but the necessity of which these media, or instruments of knowledge, cannot supersede].
- c. Or it [Aph. 59] may be explained as follows, viz.: But then, [seeing that] it is declared, by the assertion [in Aph. 56], viz., that 'The removal of it is to be effected by the necessary means,' that knowledge, in the shape of discrimination [between Soul and Nature], is the remover of non-discrimination [in regard to the matter in question], tell us, is that knowledge of a like nature with the hearing

[ै] वाङ्गाचमिप पुरुषस्य बन्धादिकं श्रवणमन-नमाचेण न बाध्यतेऽपरोश्चादृते साश्चान्कारं विना यथा दिङ्कूढजनस्य वाङ्गाचमिप दिग्वेप-रीत्यं श्रवणयुक्तिभ्यां न बाध्यते साश्चान्कारं वि-नेत्यर्थः॥

[of Testimony], &c.? Or is it something peculiar? A reply to this being looked for, he enounces the aphorism [§ 59]: 'Moreover, it is not to be removed by argument,' &c. That is to say: non-discrimination is not excluded, is not cut off, by argument, or by testimony, unless there be discrimination as an immediate perception; just as is the case with one who is bewildered in regard to [his] direction; because the only thing to remove an immediate error is an immediate individual perception! [of the truth. For example, a man with the jaundice perceives white objects as if they were yellow. He may infer that the piece of chalk which he looks at is really white; or he may believe the testimony of a friend, that it is white; but still nothing will remove his erroneous perception of yellowness in the chalk, except a direct perception of its whiteness].

d. Having thus, then, set forth the fact that Liberation results from the immediate discrimination [of Soul from Nature], the next thing to be set forth is the 'discrimination' | [here referred to].

e. This being the topic, in the first place, since only if Soul and Nature exist, liberation can result from the discrimination of the one from the other, therefore that 'instrument of right knowledge' (pramána) which establishes the existence of these [two imperceptible realities] is [first] to be set forth:²

अचासुषाणासनुमानेन बोधो धूमादिभिरिव वहूे ॥ ६० ॥

The evidence for things imperceptible.

Aph. 60. The knowledge of things imperceptible is by means of Inference; as that of fire [when not directly perceptible,] is by means of smoke, &c.

a. That is to say: 'of things imperceptible,' i.e., of things not cognizable by the senses, e.g., Nature and the Soul, 'the knowledge,' i.e., the fruit lodged in the soul, is brought about by means of that instrument of right knowledge [which may be called] 'Inference' (anumána), [but which (see Nyáya Aphorisms, I., § 5) is, more correctly, 'the recognition of a Sign']; as [the knowledge that there is] fire [in such and such a locality, where we cannot directly

- b. Moreover, it is to be understood that that which is [true, but yet is] not established by 'Inference,' is established by Revelation. But, since 'Inference' is the chief [among the instruments of knowledge], in this [the Sánkhya] System, 'Inference' only is laid down [in the aphorism,] as the chief thing; but Revelation is not disregarded ² [in the Sánkhya system; as will be seen from Aph. 88 of this Book].
- c. He [next] exhibits the order of creation of those things among which Nature is the first, and the relation of cause and effect [among these, severally], preparatorily to the argument that will be [afterwards] stated:³

[े] अचासुषाणामप्रत्यसाणां प्रकृतिपुरुषादीना-मनुमानेन प्रमाणेन बोधः पुरुषनिष्ठं फलां सिडं भवति यथा धूमादिभिजेनितेनानुमानेन वहेः सिडिरित्यर्थः॥

Aph. 61. Nature (prakriti) is the state of equipoise of Goodness (sattwa), Passion (rajas), and Darkness (tamas):

from Nature [proceeds] Mind (mahat); from Mind, Self-consciousness (ahankára); from Self-consciousness, the five Subtile Elements (tan-mátra), and both sets [external and internal,] of Organs (indriya); and, from the Subtile Elements, the Gross Elements (sthúla-bhúta). [Then there is] Soul (purusha). Such is the class of twenty-five.

- a. 'The state of equipoise' of the [three] things called 'Goodness,' &c., is their being neither less nor more [one than another]; that is to say, the state of not being [developed into] an effect [in which one or other of them predominates]. And thus 'Nature' is the triad of 'Qualities' (guna), distinct from the products [to which this triad gives rise]: such is the complete meaning.²³
- b. These things, viz., 'Goodness,' &c., [though spoken of as the three Qualities], are not 'Qualities' (guna) in the Vaiseshika sense of the word; because [the 'Qualities' of the Vaixeshika system have, themselves, no qualities (see Kaṇáda's 16th Aph.); while] these have the qualities of Conjunction, Disjunction, Lightness, Force,¹ Weight, &c.³ In this [Sánkhya] system, and in Scripture, &c., the word 'Quality' (guṇa) is employed [as the name of the three things in question],³ because they are subservient to Soul [and, therefore, hold a secondary rank in the scale of being], and because they form the cords [which the word guṇa also signifies], viz., 'Mind,' &c., which consist of the three [so-called] 'Qualities,' and which bind, as a [cow, or other] brute-beast, the Soul.' *

c. Of this [Nature] the principle called 'the great one' (mahat), viz., the principle of 'Understanding' (buddhi), is the product. 'Self-consciousness' is a conceit [of separate personality]. Of this there are two products, (1) the Balavattwa; for which I find the variant chalatwa, 'mobility.' Ed.

But 'Soul' is something distinct from either product or cause. Such is the class of twenty-five, the aggregate of things. That is to say, besides these there is nothing.'

d. He [next], in [several] aphorisms, declares the order of the inferring ² [of the existence of these principles, the one from the other:

स्यूलात्पञ्चतन्मात्रस्य ॥ ६२ ॥

The existence of the 'Subtile Elements' is inferred from that of the 'Gross,' Aph. 62. [The knowledge of the existence] of the five 'Subtile Elements' is [by inference,] from the 'Gross Elements.'

- a. 'The knowledge, by inference,' so much is supplied,' [to complete the aphorism, from Aph. 60].
- b. Earth, &c., the 'Gross Elements,' are proved to exist, by Perception; [and] thereby [i. e., from that Perception; for Perception must precede Inference, as stated in Gotama's 5th Aphorism,] are the 'Subtile Elements' inferred, [the στοιχεία στοιχείων of Empedocles]. And so the application [of the process of inference to the case] is as follows:
- (1) The Gross Elements, or those which have not reached the absolute limit [of simplification, or of the atomic], consist of things [Subtile Elements, or Atoms,] which have distinct qualities; [the earthy element having the distinctive quality of Odour; and so of the others]:
 - (2) Because they are gross;
- (3) [And everything that is gross is formed of something less gross, or, in other words, more subtile,] as jars, webs, &c.;² [the gross web being formed of the less gross threads; and so of the others].

And thence that of Self-consciousness.

nal [organs], and from these ['Subtile Elements,' mentioned in Aph. 62].

- a. By inference from [the existence of] the external and internal organs, and from [that of] these 'Subtile Elements,' there is the knowledge of [the existence of such a principle as] Self-consciousness.¹
- b. The application [of the process of inference to the case] is in the following [somewhat circular] manner:
- (1) The Subtile Elements and the Organs are made up of things consisting of Self-consciousness:
 - (2) Because they are products of Self-consciousness:
- (3) Whatever is not so [i. e., whatever is not made out of Self-consciousness] is not thus [i. e., is not a product of Self-consciousness]; as the Soul, [which, not being made up thereof, is not a product of it].²
- c. But then, if it be thus [i. e., if it be, as the Sánkhyas declare, that all objects, such as jars, are made up of Self-consciousness, while Self-consciousness depends on 'Understanding,' or 'Intellect,' or 'Mind,' the first product of 'Nature' (see Aph. 61)], then [some may object, that], since it would be the case that the Self-consciousness of the potter is the material of the jar, the jar made by him would disappear, on the beatification of the potter, whose internal organ [or 'Understanding'] then surceases.

[े] बाह्याभ्यन्तराभ्यामिन्द्रियाभ्यां तैस्तन्माचैश्वाहं-कारस्यानुमानेन बोधः॥

[ै] तन्माचेन्द्रियाग्यभिमानवद्द्र्योपादानकान्य-भिमानकार्यद्रयत्वात्। यत्नैवं तत्नैवं यथा पुरुष इति प्रयोगः॥

And this [the objector may go on to say,] is not the case; because another man [after the beatification of the potter,] recognizes that 'This is that same jar' [which, you may remember, was fabricated by our deceased acquaintance].'

d. [In reply to this we say,] it is not thus; because, on one's beatification, there is an end of only those modifications of his internal organ [or 'Intellect'] which could be causes [as the jar no longer can be,] of the emancipated soul's experiencing [either good or ill], but not an end of the modifications of intellect in general, nor [an end] of intellect altogether: [as that we might spare ourselves the trouble of further argument, so far as concerns the objection grounded on the assumption that the intellect of the potter surceases, on his beatification: but we may go further, and admit, for the sake of argument, the surcease of the 'intellect' of the beatified potter, without conceding any necessity for the surcease of his pottery. This alternative theory of the case may be stated as follows]:

e. Or [as Berkeley suggests, in his Principles of Human knowledge, Ch. vi.], let the Self-consciousness of the Deity be the cause why jars and the like [continue to exist], and not the Self-consciousness of the potter, &c.,¹ [who may lose their Self-consciousness, whereas the Deity, the sum of all life, Hiranyagarbha (see Vedánta-śara, § 62), never loses his Self-consciousness, while aught living continues].

नन्वेवं कुलालाहंकारस्यापि घटापादानला-पत्त्या कुलालमुक्ती तदन्तः करणनाशे तिचिमित-घटनाशः स्यात्। न चैतद्युक्तं पुरुषान्तरेण स एवायं घट इति प्रत्यभिज्ञायमानलादिति॥

² मैवं मुक्तपुरुषभागहेतुपरिणामस्यैव तदन्तः-करणे माक्षात्तरमुळदाच तु परिणामसामान्य-स्यान्तःकरणस्वरूपस्य वाळदेः॥

तेनान्तः करणस्य ॥ ६४ ॥

And thence that of istence] of Intellect is [by inference,] from that [Self-consciousness, § 63].

- a. That is to say: by inference from [the existence of] 'that,' viz., Self-consciousness, which is a product, there comes the knowledge of 'Intellect' (buddhi), the great 'inner organ' (antahkarana), [hence] called 'the great one' (mahat), [the existence of which is recognized] under the character of the cause of this² [product, viz., Self-consciousness].
- b. And so the application [again rather circular, of the process of inference to the case,] is as follows:
- (1) The thing called Self-consciousness is made out of the things that consist of the moods of judgment [or mind];
- (2) Because it is a thing which is a product of judgment [proceeding in the Cartesian order of cogito, ergo sum; and]

[े] अथवा घटादिष्वपि हिरएयगर्भाहंकार एव कारणमस्तु न कुलालाद्यहंकारः॥

तेनाहंकारेण कार्येण तन्कारणतया मुख्यस्या-त्तःकरणस्य महदाख्यस्य बुद्धेरनुमानेन बेाध इत्यर्थः॥

- (3) Whatever is not so [i. e., whatever is not made out of judgment, or mental assurance], is not thus [i. e., is not a product of mental assurance]; as the Soul, [which is not made out of this or of anything antecedent], &c.¹
- c. Here the following reasoning is to be understood: Every one, having first determined anything under a concept [i.e., under such a form of thought as is expressed by a general term; for example, that this which presents itself is a jar, or a human body, or a possible action of one kind or other], after that makes the judgment, 'This is I,' or 'This ought to be done by me,' and so forth: so much is quite settled; [and there is no dispute that the fact is as here stated]. Now, having, in the present instance, to look for some cause of the thing called 'Selfconsciousness' [which manifests itself in the various judgments just referred to, since the relation of cause and effect subsists between the two functions [the occasional conception, and the subsequent occasional judgment, which is a function of Self-consciousness], it is assumed, for simplicity, merely that the relation of cause and effect exists between the two substrata to which the [two sets of] functions belong; [and this is sufficient,] because it follows, as a matter of course, that the occurrence of a function of the effect must result from the occurrence of a function of the cause;2 [nothing, according to the Sánkhya, being in any

ततः प्रकृतेः ॥ ६५ ॥

Aph. 65. [The knowledge of the existence] of Nature is [by inference,] from that ['Intellect,' § 64].

- a. By inference from [the existence of] 'that,' viz., the principle [of Intellect, termed], 'the Great one,' which is a product, there comes the knowledge of [the existence of] Nature, as [its] cause.
- b. The application [of the process of inference to the case] is as follows:
- (1) Intellect, the affections whereof are Pleasure, Pain, and Dulness, is produced from something which has these affections, [those of] Pleasure, Pain, and Dulness:
- (2) Because, whilst it is a product [and must, therefore, have arisen from something consisting of that which itself now consists of], it consists of Pleasure, Pain, and Dulness; [and]

मयेदं कर्तव्यमित्यादिरूपेणेति तावित्सह्वमेव। त-चाहंकारद्रव्यकारणाकाङ्कायां वृत्त्योः कार्यकारण-भावेन तदात्र्ययेगोरेव कार्यकारणभावा लाघवा-क्कल्यते कारणस्य वृत्तिलाभेन कार्यवृत्तिलाभस्या-सार्यिकतादिति॥

- (3) [Every product that has the affections of, or that occasions, Pleasure, Pain, or Dulness, takes its rise in something which consists of these]; as lovely women, &c.¹
- c. For an agreeable woman gives pleasure to her husband, and, therefore, [is known to be mainly made up of, or] partakes of the quality of 'Goodness;' the indiscreet one gives pain to him, and, therefore, partakes of the quality of 'Foulness;' and she who is separated [and perhaps forgotten,] occasions indifference, and so partakes of the quality of 'Darkness.' ²
- d. And the appropriate refutation [of any objection], in this case, is [the principle], that it is fitting that the qualities of the effect should be [in every case,] in conformity with the qualities of the cause.³
- e Now he states how, in a different way, we have [the evidence of] inference for [the existence of] Soul, which is void of the relation of cause and effect that has been mentioned, [in the four preceding aphorisms, as existing between Nature and its various products]:

संहतपरार्थत्वात्युरुषस्य ॥ ६६ ॥

Aph. 66. [The existence] of Soul [is inferred] from the fact that the combination [of the principles of Nature into their various effects] is for the sake of another [than unintelligent Nature, or any of its similarly unintelligent products].

- a. 'Combination,' i. e., conjunction, which is the cause [of all products; these resulting from the conjunction of their constituent parts]. Since whatever has this quality, as Nature,² Mind, and so on [unlike Soul, which is not made up of parts], is for the sake of some other; for this reason it is understood that Soul exists: such is the remainder,³ [required to complete the aphorism].
- b. But the application [of the argument, in this particular case, is as follows]:
- (1) The thing in question, viz, Nature the 'Great one,' with the rest [of the aggregate of the unintelligent], has, as its fruit [or end], the [mundane] experiences and the [eventual] Liberation of some other than itself:

े अय यथोक्तकार्यकारणभावशून्यस्य पुरुषस्य प्रकारान्तरेणानुमानमाह॥

? Here indicated by the adjective avyakta, 'the indiscrete.' See Aph. 136 of this Book. Ed.

ै संहतः कारणीभूतसंयोगः। तद्दतोऽव्यक्तम-हदादेः परार्थनाज्वेतोः पुरुषस्य बोध द्वति शेषः॥

- (2) Because it is a combination [or compages];
- (3) [And every combination,] as a couch, or a seat, or the like, [is for another's use, not for its own; and its several component parts render no mutual service].¹
- c. Now, in order to establish that it is the cause of all [products], he establishes the elernity of Nature (prakriti):

मूले मूलाभावादमूलं मूलम् ॥ ६७ ॥

Argument for the eternary of Nature.

Aph. 67. Since the root has no root, the root [of all] is rootless.

a. Since 'the root' (múla), i.e., the cause of the twenty-three principles, [which, with Soul and the root itself, make up the twenty-five realities recognized in the Sánkhya,] 'has no root,' i.e., has no cause, the 'root,' viz., Nature (pradhána), is 'rootless,' i.e., void of root. That is to say, there is no other cause of Nature; because there would be

This seems to mean. 'There being no root to a root, the root [or radical principle, in the Sankhyn,] is rootless.'

In several MSS, which I consulted in India I found the strange reading: मूलं मूलाभावादमूलं मूलानाम् ! 'The root of roots, since it has no root, is rootless.' This is very like saying that A=A. Ed.

a regressus in infinitum,¹ [if we were to suppose another cause, which, by parity of reasoning, would require another cause; and so on without end].

b. He states the argument [just mentioned] in regard to this, [as follows]:²

पारम्पर्येऽप्येकच परिनिष्ठेति संज्ञामाचम् ॥ ६५ ॥

' मूले चयाविंशतितस्वानां कारणे मूलाभा-वात्कारणाभावान्मूलं प्रधानममूलं मूलशून्यम् । अनवस्थापत्या प्रधानस्य न कारणात्तरमस्ती-त्यर्थः॥

The source of the preceding exposition I have not ascertained. Vijnána has: चयोविंशतितस्वानां मूलमुपादानं प्र-धानं मूलगून्यमनवस्थापत्या तच मूलान्तरा-संभवादित्यर्थः। Nágeśa: मूलं सर्वेषामुपादानं प्र-धानं मूलशून्यमनवस्थापत्या मूलभूते तच मूला-त्तरासंभवादित्यर्थः। Aniruddha: मूलप्रकृतेर्मूलाभा-वात्कारणाभावादमूलं यत्कारणं तन्मूलम्। सा प्रकृतिः। Vedánti Mahádeva: चयोविंशतितस्वानां मूले प्रधानेऽनवस्थापत्या कारणाभावादकारणं प्रधानमित्यर्थः। Ed.

² अच युक्तिमाह॥

The employment of the term Primal Agency, or Nature, is merely to debut the regressus in infi-

the meaning.1

Aph. 68. Even if there be a succession, there is a halt at some one point; and so it is merely a name [that we give to the point in question, when we speak of the root of things, under the the name of 'Nature'].

a. Since there would be the fault of regressus in infinitum, if there were a succession of causes,—another cause of Nature, and another [cause] of that one, again,—there must be, at last, a halt, or conclusion, at some one point, somewhere or other, at some one, uncaused, eternal thing. Therefore, that at which we stop is the Primal Agency (pra-kriti); for this [word prakriti, usually and conveniently rendered by the term Nature, is nothing more

b. But then [some Vedántí may object, according to this view of matters], the position that there are just twentyfive realities is not made out; for, in addition to 2 the 'Indiscrete' [or primal Nature], which [according to you,] is the cause of Mind,3 another unintelligent principle, named 'Ignorance' [see Vedinta-sara, § 21], presents than a sign to denote the cause which is the root: such is [े] प्रकृतेरन्यन्कारणं तस्यायन्यदिति पारम्पर्येऽप्यनवस्थादे। षादन्ततो ऽकारण एक नैक-स्मिन्यवकुवचिन्नित्ये परिनिष्ठा पर्यवसानं भवि-णतीति। अतो यत्र पर्यवसानं सैव प्रकृतिरिति हि मुलकारणस्य संज्ञामानमित्यर्थः ॥ itself. Having pondered this doubt, he declares [as follows]:

समानः प्रकृतेर्देयोः ॥ ६० ॥

Nature and Soul alike Aph. 69. Alike, in respect of Nature, and of both [Soul and Nature, is the argument for the uncreated existence].²

a. In the discussion of the Primal Agent [Nature], the cause which is the root [of all products], the same side is taken by us both, the asserter [of the Sánkhya doctrine] and the opponent [Vedántí]. This may be thus stated: As there is mention, in Scripture, of the production of Nature, so, too, is there of that of Ignorance, in such texts as this, viz.: 'This Ignorance, which has five divisions, was produced from the great Spirit.' Hence it must needs be that a figurative production is intended to be asserted, in respect of one of these [and not the literal production of both; else we should have no root at all]; and, of the two, it is with Nature only that a figurative production, in the shape of a manifestation through conjunction with Soul, &c., is congruous. A production [such as that metaphorical one here spoken of, the characteristic of which is conjunction is mentioned; for there is mention of [such] a figurative origination of Soul and Nature, in a passage of the Kaurma [Purúna], beginning, 'Of action [or the Primal Agency], and knowledge [or Soul],' and so on. And, as there is no mention, in Scripture, of the origin of Ignorance, as figurative, it is not from eternity. And Ignorance, which consists of false knowledge, has been declared, in an aphorism of the Yoga, to be [not a separate entity, but] 'an affection of the mind.' Hence there is no increase to the [list of the twenty-five] Realities,' [in the shape of a twenty-sixth principle, to be styled Ignorance].

े ननु पञ्चविंशतितस्वानीति ने।पपछते मह-त्रस्वकारणाव्यक्तापेक्षयाविद्याख्यजडतस्वान्तराप-त्रेरित्याशङ्काह॥

² This is Dr. Ballantyne's revised translation, suggested by a remark of Vijnána, quoted and translated below, in b. The rendering now replaced runs: 'Alike [is the opinion] of both [of us], in respect of Nature.' The side-note was formerly correspondent to a., viz.: 'He meets a Vedántic objection.' Ed.

b. Or [according to another, and more probable, interpretation of the aphorism,] the meaning is this, that the argument is the same in support of both, i.e., of both Soul and Nature: such is the meaning.¹

c. But then, there being [as has been shown,] a mode of arriving, by inference, at [a knowledge of the saving truth in regard to] Nature, Soul, &c., whence is it that reflexion, in the shape of discrimination [between Soul and Nature], does not take place in the case of all [men]? In regard to this point, he states [as follows]:²

अधिकारिचैविध्याच नियमः॥ ७०॥

All do not profit by the saving truth; because it is only the best kind of people that are fully amenable to reason. Aph. 70. There is no rule [or necessity, that all should arrive at the truth]; because those who are privileged [to engage in the inquiry] are of three descriptions.

a. For those privileged [to engage in the inquiry] are of three descriptions, through their distinction into those who, in reflecting, are dull, mediocre, and best. Of these, by the dull the [Sánkhya] arguments are frustrated [and altogether set aside], by means of the sophisms that have been uttered by the Bauddhas, &c. By the mediocre they [are brought into doubt, or, in other words,] are made to appear as if there were equally strong arguments on the other side, by means of arguments which really prove the reverse [of what these people employ them to prove], or by arguments which are not true: [see the section on Fallacies in the Tarka-sangraha]. But it is only the best of those privileged, that reflect in the manner that has been set forth [in our exposition of the process of reflexion which leads to the discriminating of Soul from Nature]: such is the import. But there is no rule that all must needs reflect in the manner so set forth: such is the literal meaning.¹

[े] अथ वा दयोः प्रकृतिपुरुषयोः समान एव न्याय इत्यर्थः॥

b. He now, through two aphorisms, defines 'the Great one' and 'Self-consciousness'; ² [the reader being presumed to remember that Nature consists of the three 'Qualities' in equipoise, and to be familiar with the other principles, such as the 'Subtile elements' (see § 61)]:

महदाख्यमायं कार्यं तन्मनः॥ ७१॥

By 'the Great one' is Primal Agent, Nature], which is called 'the Great one,' is Mind.

a. 'Mind' (manas). 'Mind' [is so called], because its function is 'thinking' (manana). By 'thinking' is here meant' judging' (nischaya). That of which this is the function is 'intellect' (buddhi); and that is the first product, that called 'the Great one' (mahat): such is the meaning.

चरमाऽहंकारः॥ ७२॥

The relation of Self-consciousness to Mind. Aph. 72. 'Self-consciousness' is that which is subsequent [to Mind.]

- a. 'Self-consciousness,' the function of which is a conceit [that 'I exist,' 'I do this, that, and the other thing'], is that which is subsequent: that is to say, 'Self-consciousness' is the next after 'the Great one' [§ 71].
- b. Since 'Self-consciousness' is that whose function is a conceit [which brings out the Ego, in every case of cognition, the matter of which cognition would, else, have lain dormant in the bosom of Nature, the formless Objective], it therefore follows that the others [among the phenomena of mundane existence,] are effects of this [Self-consciousness]; and so he declares [as follows]:³

[ं] मन इति । मननवृत्तिकं मनः । मननमन निष्ययः । तदृत्तिका बुद्धिः । तन्महदाख्यमाखं कार्यमित्यर्थः ॥

[ै] ऋहंकारे।ऽभिमानवृत्तिकः पदार्थश्वरमे। मह-ते।ऽनन्तरे।ऽहंकार इत्यर्थः।

[ै] यतो ऽभिमानवृत्तिकोऽहंकारे।ऽतस्तन्कार्यत्वमु-त्ररेषामुपपचमित्याह ॥

तत्कार्यत्वमुत्तरेषाम् ॥ ७३॥

All products, save Mind, result from Selfconsciousness Aph. 73. To the others it belongs to be products thereof, [i.e., of Self-consciousness].

- a. 'To be products thereof,' i.e., to be products of Self-consciousness: that is to say, the fact of being products thereof belongs to the others,² the eleven 'Organs' (indriya), the five 'Subtile elements,' and, mediately, to the [gross] Elements, also, the products of the Subtile elements.³
- b. But then, if it be thus [some one may say], you relinquish your dogma, that Nature is the cause of the whole world. Therefore he declares [as follows]:

आयहेतुता तद्द्वारा पारम्पर्येऽष्यणुवत् ॥ ७४ ॥

- ¹ Instead of उत्तरेषां, which seems to be peculiar to Vijnána, Aniruddha and others have the preferable lection श्चन्येषां. Ed.

- 'नन् यद्येवं तर्हि प्रधानं सर्वजगत्कारणिमिति सिद्धान्तहानिरत स्नाह ॥

Nature, immediately the cause of Mind, is, mediately, the cause of all other products. Aph. 74. Moreover, mediately, through that [i.e., the 'Great one' (§71)], the first [cause, viz., Nature,] is the cause [of all products]; as is the case with the Atoms, [the causes, additts causes of ions for though not the immediate causes, of jars, &c.].

- a. 'Moreover, mediately,' i.e., moreover, not in the character of the immediate cause, 'the first,' i.e., Nature, is the cause of 'Self-consciousness' and the rest, [mediately,] through 'the Great one' and the rest; as, in the theory of the Vaišeshikas, the Atoms are the cause of a jar, or the like, only [mediately,] through combinations of two atoms, and so on: such is the meaning.'
- b. But then, since, also, both Nature and Soul are eternal, which of them is [really] the cause of the creation's commencing? In regard to this, he declares [as follows]:²

पूर्वभावित्वे द्योरेकतरस्य हानेऽन्यतरयोगः ॥ ७५॥

े पारम्पर्येऽपि साक्षादहेतुनेऽपाछायाः प्रकृ-तेर्हेतुताहंकारादिषु महदादिद्वारास्ति यथा वैशेषि-कमतेऽणूनां घटादिहेतुता द्यणुकादिदारैवेत्यर्थः॥

³ Slightly better, perhaps, than this reading is that of Aniruddha: पूर्वभावित्वे द्वयोरेकतरहानेनान्यतरयोगः। Aniruddha's explanation here follows: न पूर्वभावित्वमाचेण कारणतं किं त्वन्वययतिरेकाभ्यां द्वयोर्भध्य एकस्य

Why Nature is the ture] are antecedent [to all products], since the one [viz., Soul,] is devoid [of this character of being a cause], it is applicable [only] to the other of the two, [viz., Nature].

- a. That is to say: 'while both,' viz., Soul and Nature, are preexistent to every product, still, 'since the one,' viz., Soul, from the fact of its not being modified [into anything else, as elay is modified into a jar], must be 'devoid,' or lack the nature of a cause, 'it is applicable,' i.e., the nature of a cause must belong, to the other of the two.'
- b. But then [some one may say], let Atoms alone be causes; since there is no dispute [that these are causal]. In reply to this, he says:²

Aph. 76. What is limited cannot be the substance of all [things].

a. That which is limited cannot be the substance of all [things]; as yarn cannot be the [material] cause of a jar. Therefore it would [on the theory suggested,] be necessary to mention separate causes of [all] things severally; and it is simpler to assume a single cause. Therefore Nature alone is the cause. Such is the meaning.

b. He alleges Scripture in support of this:2

तदुत्पित्तिश्रुतेश्व॥ ७७ ॥

Scripture declares in favour of the theory.

Aph. 77. And [the proposition that Nature is the cause of all is proved] from the text of Scripture, that the origin [of the world] is therefrom, [i.e., from Nature].

a. An argument, in the first instance, has been set forth [in § 76; for, till argument fails him, no one falls back upon authority]. Scripture, moreover, declares that Nature is the cause of the world, in such terms as, 'From Nature the world arises,' &c.3

b. But then [some one may say], a jar which antecedently did not exist is seen to come into existence. Let, then, antecedent non-existence be the cause [of each product]; since this is an invariable antecedent, [and, hence, a cause; 'the invariable antecedent being denominated a cause,' if Dr. Brown, in his 6th lecture, is to be trusted]. To this he replies:

नावस्तुनो वस्तुसिद्धिः ॥ १८ ॥

Examinto nihit fit.

Aph. 78. A thing is not made out of nothing.

- a. That is to say: it is not possible that out of nothing, i.e., out of a nonentity, a thing should be made, i.e., an entity should arise. It an entity were to arise out of a nonentity, then, since the character of a cause is visible in its product, the world, also, would be unreal: such is the meaning.²
- b. Let the world, too, be unreal: what harm is that to us? [If any ask this,] he, therefore, declares [as follows]:

अवाधाददुष्टकारणजन्यताच नावस्तृतम् ॥ ७० ॥

े नन् प्रागसता घटस्य भवनं दृश्यते। नियत-पूर्वभावितात्प्रागभावः कारणमस्वित्यत ञ्चाह॥

' भवतु जगद्यवस्तु का ना हानिरित्यत आह

Reasons why the world is not to be supposed unreal. Aph. 79. It [the world] is not unreal; because there is no fact contradictory [to its reality], and because it is not the [false] result of depraved causes,

- [leading to a belief in what ought not to be believed].
- a. When there is the notion, in regard to a shell [of a pearl-oyster, which sometimes glitters like silver], that it is silver, its being silver is contradicted by the [subsequent and more correct] cognition, that this is not silver. But, in the case in question [that of the world regarded as a reality], no one ever has the cognition, 'This world is not in the shape of an entity,' by which [cognition, if any one ever really had such,] its being an entity might be opposed.
- b. And it is held that that is false which is the result of a depraved cause; e.g., some one's cognition of a [white] conch-shell as yellow, through such a fault as the jaundice, [which depraves his eye-sight]. But, in the case in question, [that of the world regarded as a reality], there is no such [temporary or occasional] depravation [of the senses]; because all, at all times, cognize the world as a reality. Therefore the world is not an unreality.

[े] शुक्ती रजतिमिति ज्ञाने नेदं रजतिमिति ज्ञा-नाद्रजतबाधः । न चाच नेदं भावरूपं जगदिति कस्यापि ज्ञानं येन भावरूपबाधः स्यात् ॥

c. But then [some one may suggest], let a nonentity be the [substantial] cause of the world; still the world will not [necessarily, therefore,] be unreal. In regard to this, he declares [as follows]:

भावे तयोगेन तिसिंडिरभावे तदभावान्तुतस्तरां तिसिंडिः॥ ५०॥

The product of something is something; and that of nothing, nothing. Aph. 80. If it [the substantial cause,] be an entity, then this would be the case, [that the product would be an entity], from its union [or identity] therewith; [but] if [the cause be] a nonentity, then how could it possibly be the case [that the product would be real], since it is a nonentity, [like the cause with which it is united, in the relation of identity]?

a. If an entity were the substantial cause [of the world], then, since [it is a maxim that] the qualities of the cause present themselves in the product, 'this would be the case,' i.e., it would be the case that the product was real, 'because of union therewith,' i.e., because of the union [of the product] with the reality [which is its substratum]. [But,] since, [by parity of reasoning], if a nonentity [were the substantial cause], the world would be a nonentity, then, by reason of its being a nonentity, i.e., by reason of the world's being [on that supposition,] necessarily a nonentity, [like its supposed cause], how could this be the case, '[that it would be real]?

b. But then [a follower of the Mimánsá may say], since [it would appear that] nonentity can take no shape but that of nonentity, let works alone be the cause of the world. What need have we of the hypothesis of 'Nature'? To this he replies:

न कर्मण उपादानायागात् ॥ ५१॥

Aph. 81. No; for works are not adapted to be the substantial cause [of any product].

a. Granting that 'the unseen' [merit or demerit arising from actions] may be an instrumental cause, [in bringing about the mundane condition of the agent], yet we never see merit or demerit in the character of the substantial cause [of any product]: and our theories ought to show deference to our experience. 'Nature' is to be accepted; because Liberation arises [see § 56, and § 83,] from discerning the distinction between Nature and the Soul.'

b. But then [some one may say], since Liberation can be attained by undertaking the things directed by the Veda, what occasion is there for [our troubling ourselves about] Nature? To this he replies:

नानुष्रविकादि तिसिडिः साध्यतेनावृह्मियोगा-दपुरुषार्थतम् ॥ ५२ ॥

Salvation is not to be obtained by ritud observances,

Aph. 82. The accomplishment thereof [i.e., of Liberation,] is not, moreover, through Scriptural rites: the chief end of man does not consist in this [which is gained through such means]; because, since this consists of what is accomplished through acts, [and is, therefore, a product, and not eternal], there is [still left impending over the ritualist,] the liability to repetition of births.

a. 'Scriptural means,' such as sacrifices, [are so called], because they are heard from [the mouth of the instructor in] Scripture. Not thereby, moreover, is 'the accomplishment thereof,' i.e., the accomplishment of Liberation; 'because one is liable to repetition of births, by reason of the fact that it [the supposed Liberation,] was accomplished by means,' i.e., because the [thus far] liberated

For this reason, the chief end of man does not consist in this, 2 [which is gained through ritual observances].

b. He shows what does constitute the chief end of man:

तच प्राप्तविवेकस्यानावृत्तिश्रुतिः ॥ ५३ ॥

In regard to the attainment of the chuf end of man, the Scripture concurs with the Sánkhya Aph. 83. There is Scripture for it, that he who has attained to discrimination, in regard to these [i.e., Nature and Soul], has no repetition of births.

a. 'In regard to these,' i.e., in regard to Nature and Soul, of him who has attained to discrimination, there is a text declaring, that, in consequence of his knowledge of the distinction, there will be no repetition of births; the text, viz., 'He does not return again,' &c. 5

b. He states an objection to the opposite view:1

दुःखादुःखं जलाभिषेकवच जाडचियमाकः॥ ५४॥

Pain can lead only to pain, not to liberation from it.

Aph. 84. From pain [occasioned, e.g., to victims in sacrifice,] must come pain [to the sacrificer, and not liberation from pain]; as there is not relief from chilliness, by affusion of water.

- a. If Liberation were to be effected by acts, [such as sacrifices], then, since the acts involve a variety of pains, Liberation itself [on the principle that every effect includes the qualities of its cause,] would include a variety of pains; and it would be a grief, from the fact that it must eventually end: for, to one who is distressed by chilliness the affusion of water does not bring liberation from his chilliness, but, rather, [additional] chilliness.²
- b. But then [some one may say], the fact that the act is productive of pain is not the motive [to the performance of sacrifice]; but the [real] reason is this, that the act is productive of things desirable. And, in accordance with this, there is the text, 'By means of acts [of sacrifice] they may partake of immortality,' &c. To this he replies:³

[े] विपक्षे देाषमाह॥

[&]quot;यदि कर्मसाध्या मोस्रो भवेत्कर्मेशो दुःखबहु-लालान्मोस्रोऽपि दुःखबहुलः स्यादन्ततः स्वयिते-नापि दुःखं स्यान्ति जाडचार्त्तस्य जाडचिवमोको जलाभिषेकात्प्रत्युत जाडचमेवेति॥

The character of the end contemplated makes no difference in regard to the transitoriness of what is effected by works.

Aph. 85. [Liberation cannot arise from acts]; because, whether the end be something desirable, or undesirable, [and we admit that the motive of the sacrifice is not the giving pain to the vietim], this makes no difference in regard to its being the result of acts, [and, therefore, not eternal, but transitory].

a. Grant that pain is not what is [intended] to be accomplished by works done without desire, [on the part of the virtuous sacrificer], still, though there is a difference [as you contend,] between [an act done to secure] something enjoyable and an act done without reference to enjoyment, this makes no difference with respect to the fact of the Liberation's being produced by acts, [which, I repeat, permanent Liberation cannot be]: there must still again be pain; for it [the Liberation supposed to have been attained through works,] must be perishable, because The text which declares that works it is a production. done without desire are instruments of Liberation has reference to knowledge, [which, I grant, may be gained by such means]; and Liberation comes through knowledge; so that these [works] are instruments of Liberation

¹ The reading of Aniruddha, according to my MSS., is का-स्याकामेऽपि. Ed. mediately: 1 [but you will recollect that the present inquiry regards the immediate cause].

b. [But then, some one may say], supposing that Liberation may take place [as you Sánkhyas contend,] through the knowledge of the distinction between Nature and Soul, still, since, from the perishableness [of the Liberation effected by this means, as well as any other means], mundane life may return, we are both on an equality, [vc, whose Liberation you Sánkhyas look upon as transitory, and you Sánkhyas, whose Liberation we, again, look upon as being, by parity of reasoning, in much the same predicament]. To this he replies:²

S Dr. Ballantyne, on republishing the Sánkhya Aphorisms in the Bibliotheca Indica, adopted the genuine reading, arisintal, instead of that given above, which I find, indeed, in the Serampore edition of the Sánkhya-pravachana-bháshya, but in no MS. He ought, however, at the same time, to have altered his translation,

The right means effect Liberation once for all. Aph. 86. Of him who is essentially liberated, his bonds having absolutely perished, it [i.e., the fruit of his saving knowledge,] is absolute: there is no parity [between his case and that of him who relies on works, and who may thereby secure a temporary sojourn in Paradise, only to return again to earth].

- a. Of him 'who is essentially liberated,' who, in his very essence, is free, there is the destruction of bondage. The bond [see § 56,'] is Non-discrimination [between Nature and Soul]. By the removal thereof there is the destruction, the annihilation, of Non-discrimination: and how is it possible that there should again be a return of the mundane state, when the destruction of Non-discrimination is absolute? Thus there is no [such] similarity,² [between the two cases, as is imagined, by the objector, under § 85.b.].
- b. It has been asserted [in § 61,] that there is a class of twenty-five [things which are realities]; and, since these cannot be ascertained [or made out to be true], except by which, in conformity with the unadulterated text, might have run somewhat as follows: 'Of him who is, in himself, liberated all extinction of bondage is final,' &c. Such is the interpretation which, on comparison of the various commentaries, seems to be the most eligible. Ed.

a. 'Not lodged,' i.e., not deposited in 'one rightly cognizing' (pramátri); in short, not previously known. The 'determination,' i.e., the ascertainment [or right apprehension] of such a thing, or reality, is 'right notion'; and, whether this be an affection 'of both,' i.e., of Intellect, and also of Soul [as some hold that it is], or of only one or other of the two, [as others hold,] either way, 'what is, in the highest degree, productive' of this 'right notion' is [what we term proof, or] evidence, (pramána): such is the definition of evidence in general; [the definition of its several species falling to be considered hereafter]: such is the meaning.'

It is with a view to the exclusion of Memory, Error, and Doubt, in their order, that we employ [when speaking of the result of evidence,] the expressions 'not previously known' [which excludes things remembered], and 'reality' [which excludes mistakes and fancies], and 'discrimination,' [which excludes doubt].
- c. In regard to this [topic of knowledge and the sources of knowledge], if 'right notion,' is spoken of as located in the Soul [see § 87. a.], then the [proof, or] evidence is an affection of the Intellect. If [on the other hand, the 'right notion' is spoken of as] located in the Intellect, in the shape of an affection [of that the affections of which are mirrored by the Soul], then it [the proof, or evidence, or whatever we may choose to call that from which 'right notion' results,] is just the conjunction of an organ [with its appropriate object; such conjunction giving rise to sense-perception], &c. case,] are [to receive the name of] proof (pramána). You are to understand, that, when the organ of vision, &c., are spoken of as 'evidence,' it is only as being mediately¹ [the sources of right knowledge].

d. How many [kinds of] proofs [then,] are there? To this he replies:

विविधं प्रमाणं तिसिडी सर्वेसिडेनीधिकासि-डि: ॥ ৮৮ ॥

There are three kinds there is no establishment of more; because, if these be established, then all [that is true] can be established [by one or other of these three proofs].

a. 'Proof is of three kinds;' that is to say, 'perception' (pratyaksha), 'the recognition of signs' (anumána), and 'testimony' (śabda), are the [three kinds of] proofs.

- b. But then [some one may incline to say], let 'comparison' [which is reckoned, in the Nyaya, a specifically distinct source of knowledge], and the others [such as 'Conjecture,' &c., which are reckoned, in like manner, in the Mimáisá], also be instruments of right knowledge, [as well as these three], in [the matter of] the discriminating of Nature and Soul: he therefore says, 'because, if these [three] be established,' &c. And, since, if there be the three kinds of proof established,' everything [that is really true] can be established [by means of them], there is no establishment of more;' no addition to the proofs can be fairly made out; because of the cumbrousness [that sins against the philosophical maxim, that we are not to assume more than is necessary to account for the case]: such is the meaning.²
- c. For the same reason, Manu, also, has laid down only a triad of proofs, where he says [see the Institutes, Ch. xii., v. 105]: 'By that man who seeks a distinct knowledge of his duty, [these] three [sources of right knowledge] must be well understood, viz., Perception, Inference, and Scriptural authority in its various shapes [of legal institute,

And 'Comparison,' and 'Tradition' (aitihya), and the like, are included under Inference and Testimony; and 'Non-perception' (anapalabdhi) and the like are included under Perception; [for the non-perception of an absent jar on a particular spot of ground is nothing else than the perception of that spot of ground without a jar on it].

Aph. 89. Perception (pratyaksha) is that discernment which, being in conjunction [with the thing perceived], portrays the form thereof.

junction; 'portrays the form thereof,' i.e., assumes the form of the thing with which it is in conjunction [as water assumes the form of the vessel into which it is poured]; what 'discernment,' or affection of the Intellect, [does this], that [affection of the Intellect (see Yoga Aphorisms, I., § 5 and § 8. b.)] is the evidence [called] Perception: such is the meaning.

b. But then, [some one may say,] this [definition of Perception (§ 89)] does not extend [as we conceive it ought, and presume it is intended, to do,] to the perception, by adepts in the Yoga, of things past, future, or concealed [by stone walls, or such intervening things as interrupt ordinary perception]; because there is, here, no 'form of the thing, in conjunction' [with the mind of him who perceives it, while absent]: having pondered this doubt, he corrects it by [stating, as follows,] the fact, that this [supernatural sort of perception] is not what he intends to define:²

ं संबद्घं सत्संबद्धं भवत्तदाकारोल्लेखि संबद्धव-स्ताकारधारि भवति यदिज्ञानं बुद्धिवृत्तिल-त्मत्यश्चं प्रमाणमित्यर्थः॥

ं ननु योगिनामतीतानागतव्यवहितवस्तुप्रत्यक्षे ऽव्याप्तिः संबद्धवस्त्वाकाराभावादित्याशङ्क तस्या- लक्ष्यत्वेन समाधन्ने ॥

The definition not to be blamed, though it should not apply to the perceptions of the mystic. Aph. 90. It is not a fault [in the definition, that it does not apply to the perceptions of adepts in the Yoga]; because that of the adepts in the Yoga is not an external perception.

a. That is to say: it is only sense-perception that is to be here defined; and the adepts of the Yoga do not perceive through the external [organs of sense]. Therefore there is no fault [in our definition]; i.e., there is no failure to include the perceptions of these; [because there is no intention to include them].

b. [But, although this reply is as much as the objector has any right to expect,] he states the real justification² [of the definition in question]:

लीनवस्तुलब्धातिशयसंबन्धाद्वादेषः ॥ ९१ ॥

But the definition does apply to the perceptions of the mystic.

Aph. 91. Or, there is no fault [in the definition], because of the conjunction, with causal things, of that [mystical mind] which has attained exaltation.4

⁴ For the term atisaya, again rendered, in the next page, by 'exaltation,' vide infra, p. 115, note 4. Ed.

- a. Or, be it so that the perception of the Yogi, also, shall be the thing to be defined; still there is no fault [in our definition, § 89]; it does not fail to extend [to this, also]; since the mind of the Yogi, in the exaltation gained from the habitude produced by concentration, does come into conjunction with things [as existent] in their causes, [whether or not with the things as developed into products perceptible by the external senses].
- b. Here the word rendered 'causal' (lina) denotes the things, not in conjunction [with the senses], alluded to by the objector [in § 89. b.]; for we, who assert that effects exist [from eternity, in their causes, before taking the shape of effects, and, likewise, in these same causes, when again resolved into their causes], hold that even what is past, &c., still essentially exists, and that, hence, its conjunction [with the mind of the mystic, or the clairvoyant,] is possible.²

Objection, that the definition does not apply to the perceptions of the 'Lord.'

c. But then, [some one may say,] still this [definition] does not extend to the Lord's perceptions; because, since these are from everlasting, they can-

That any 'Lord' finition of Perception has no force]; because it is not proved that there is a Lord (iśwara).

- a. That there is no fault [in the definition of Perception], because there is no proof that there is a Lord, is supplied ² [from § 90].
- b. And this demurring to there being any 'Lord' is merely in accordance with the arrogant dictum of [certain] partisans [who hold an opinion not recognized by the majority]. Therefore, it is to be understood, the expression employed is, 'because it is not proved that there is a Lord,' but not the expression, 'because there is no Lord.'

- c. But, on the implication 1 that there is a 'Lord,' what we mean to speak of [in our definition of Perception, (§89),] is merely the being of the [same] kind with what is produced by conjunction 2 [of a sense-organ with its object; and the perceptions of the 'Lord' may be of the same kind with such perceptions, though they were not to come from the same source].
- d. Having pondered the doubt, 'How should the Lord not be proved [to exist] by the Scripture and the Law, [which declare his existence]?' he states a dilemma which excludes [this]:

मुक्तवडयारन्यतराभावान तत्सिडिः॥ ९३॥

A dilemma, to exclude proof that there is any 'Lord.'

Aph. 93. [And, further,] it is not proved that he [the 'Lord,'] exists; because [whoever exists must be either free or bound; and], of free and bound, he can be neither the one nor the other.

a. The 'Lord' whom you imagine, tell us, is he free from troubles, &c.? Or is he in bondage through these?

Since he is not, cannot be, either the one or the other, it is not proved that there is a 'Lord:' such is the meaning.'

b., He explains this very point:2

उभयथाप्यसत्करत्वम्³॥ ९४॥

The force of the Aph. 94. [Because,] either way, he would be inefficient.

- a. Since, if he were free, he would have no desires, &c., which [as compulsory motives,] would instigate him to create; and, if he were bound, he would be under delusion; he must be [on either alternative,] unequal to the creation, &c. 1 [of this world].
- b. But then, [it may be asked,] if such be the case, what becomes of the Scripture-texts which declare the 'Lord?' To this he replies:

[े] ईश्वरेाऽभिमतः किं क्षेणादिभिर्मुक्तो वा तैर्वेद्वो वा । अन्यतरस्याप्यभावादसंभवाचेश्वरिसिद्धिरि-त्यर्थः॥

The import of the tests which make mention of the 'Lord' are] either glorifications of the liberated Soul, or homages to the recognized [deities of the Hindu pantheon].

a. That is to say: accordingly as the case may be, some text [among those in which the term 'Lord' occurs,] is intended, in the shape of a glorification [of Soul], as the 'Lord,' [as Soul is held to be], merely in virtue of junction [with Nature], to incite [to still deeper contemplation], to exhibit, as what is to be known, the liberated Soul, i. e., absolute Soul in general; and some other text, declaratory, for example, of creatorship, &c., preceded by resolution [to create, is intended] to extol [and to purify the mind of the contemplator, by enabling him to take a part in extolling] the eternity, &c., of the familiarly known's Brahmá,

b. But then, [some one may say], even if it were thus [as alleged under § 95], what is heard in Scripture, [viz.], the fact that it [viz., Soul] is the governor of Nature, &c., would not be the case; for, in the world, we speak of government in reference only to modifications [preceded and determined] by resolutions [that so and so shall take place], &c. To this he replies:

uithathaidal According to this, the term likuara, 'mighty one,' 'lord,' is applied, by way of eulogy, either to a soul as it were liberated, or to a person who, through devotion, has acquired transcendent faculties, that is to say, the Yogi. Resolution, agent-ship, and the like, are impredicable of one absolutely liberated; and such a one, being inert and impassive, cannot be intended by likuara, 'a power.' Hence the expression, 'as it were liberated.' Also see, for atriaga,—translated, above, 'transcendent faculties,'—Book IV., Aph. 24. Ed.

Soul, like the lodestone, acts not by resolve, but through proximity. Aph. 96. The governorship [thereof, i.e., of Soul over Nature] is from [its] proximity thereto, [not from its resolving to act thereon]; as is the case with the gem, [the lodestone, in regard to iron].

- a. If it were alleged that [its, Soul's,] creativeness, or [its] governorship, was through a resolve [to create, or to govern], then this objection [brought forward under § 95. b.] would apply. But [it is not so; for,] by us [Sánkhyas,] it is held that the Soul's governorship, in the shape of creatorship, or the like, is merely from [its] proximity [to Nature]; 'as is the case with the [lodestone] gem.'
- b. As the gem, the lodestone, is attracted by iron merely by proximity, without resolving [either to act or to be acted on], &c., so, by the mere conjunction of the primal Soul, Nature is changed into the principle [called] the 'Great one,' [or Mind, (see § 61. c.)]. And in this alone consists [what we speak of as] its acting as creator towards that which is superadded to it: such is the meaning.²

c. And thus it is declared, [in some one of the Puránas ¹]:

'As the iron acts, whilst the gem [the lodestone,] stands void of volition, just so this world is created by a deity who is mere Existence. Thus it is, that there are, in the Soul, both agency [seemingly,] and non-agency, [really]. It is not an agent, inasmuch as it is void of volition; [and it is] an agent, merely through approximation [to Nature].'

d. In respect of worldly products, also, animal souls overrule, merely through their approximation [to Nature]: so he declares [as follows]:

Aph. 97. In the case of individual products, also, [the apparent agency] of animal souls [is solely through proximity].

- a. 'The agency is solely through proximity:' so much is supplied from § 96].
- b. The meaning is this, that, in the case, also, of particular productions,-the creation, &c., of things individual [as contradistinguished from that of all things in the lump, (see Vedánta-sára, § 67)],—animal souls, i.e., souls in which the intellects [of individuals] reflect themselves [see § 99. a.], overrule, merely through proximity, but not through any effort; seeing that these [animal souls] are none other than the motionless Thought.2
- c. But then, [some one may say], if there were no eternal and omniscient 'Lord,' through the doubt of a blind tradition, [in the absence of an intelligently effective guardianship], the Vedas would cease to be an authority; [a possibility which, of course, cannot be entertained for an instant]. To this he replies:

[े] अधिष्ठातृत्वं संनिधानादेवेत्यनुषज्यते॥

How the Vedas need not the 'Lord' to authenticate them. Aph. 98. The declaration of the texts or sense [of the Veda, by Brahmá, for example], since he knows the truth, [is authorative evidence].

a. To complete [the aphorism, we must say], 'since Hiranyagarbha [i.e., Brahmá,] and others [viz., Vishmu and Siva], are knowers of what is certain, i.e., of what is true, the declaration of the texts or sense of the Vedas, where these are the speakers, is evidence [altogether indisputable].

b. But then, if Soul, by its simple proximity [to Nature (§ 96)], is an overruler in a secondary sense [only of the term,—as the magnet may be said, in a secondary sense, to draw the iron, while the conviction is entertained, that, actually and literally, the iron draws the magnet],—who is the primary [or actual,] overruler? In reference to this, he says:

[े] हिरएयगभीदीनां सिडरूपस्य यथार्थस्य बी-हृत्वात्तदक्तृको वेदवाक्यार्थापदेशः प्रमाणमिति शेषः॥

[ं] ननु पुरुषस्य चेत्संनिधिमाचेण गौणमधि-ष्ठातृतं तिहे मुख्यमधिष्ठातृतं कस्येत्याकाङ्काया-माह॥

It is in the shape of the internal organ, that Nature affects Soul. Aph. 99. The internal organ, through its being enlightened thereby [i.e., by Soul], is the overruler; as is the iron, [in respect of the magnet].

- a. The internal organ, i.e., the understanding, is the overruler, through its fancying itself to be Soul, [as it does fancy,] by reason of its being enlightened by the Soul, through its happening to reflect itself in [and contemplate itself in,] Soul; 'just as the iron,' that is to say, as the attracting iron, though inactive, draws [the magnet], in consequence of [its] mere proximity,² [and so acquires magnetism by magnetic induction].
- b. He [now, having discussed the evidence that consists in direct perception,] states the definition of inference³ (anumána):

¹ Aniruddha has महतोऽन्तःकारणस्यः prefixing to 'the internal organ' the synonymous 'the Great One.' Ed.

Inference defined.

Aph. 100. The knowledge of the connected [e.g., fire], through perception of the connexion [e.g., of fire with smoke], is inference.

- a. That is to say: inference [or conviction of a general truth,] is [a kind of] evidence consisting in a [mental] modification, [which is none other than] the knowledge of the connected, i.e., of the constant accompanier, through the knowledge of the constant accompaniment: by 'connexion' (pratibandha) here being meant 'constant attendedness' (vyápti); and through the perception thereof² [it being that the mind has possession of any general principle].
- b. But a conclusion (anumiti) is knowledge of the soul; whilst an Inference, so far forth as it is an instrument in the establishment of knowledge deducible from it, is an affection of the internal organ, or understanding (see § 87. c.)
 - c. He [next] defines testimony 1 (śabda):

¹ प्रतिबद्धः is the reading of Nágesa and of Vedánti Mahádeva. Ed.

[ै] प्रतिबन्धे। व्याप्तिस्तदृशो व्याप्तिज्ञानात्प्रति-बह्वस्य व्यापकस्य ज्ञानं वृत्तिरूपमनुमानं प्रमाण-मित्यर्थः॥

Valid testimony defined.

Aph. 101. Testimony [such as is entitled to the name of evidence,] is a declaration by one worthy [to be believed].

- a. Here 'fitness' means 'suitableness;' and so the evidence which is called 'Testimony' is the knowledge arising from a suitable declaration: such is the meaning. And [while this belongs to the understanding, or internal organ (see § 100. b.)] the result is that [knowledge] in the Soul, [which is called] 'knowledge by hearing' (śabda-bodha).
- b. He [next] volunteers to tell us what is the use of his setting forth [the various divisions of] evidence:²

उभयसिद्धिः प्रमाणात्तदुपदेशः॥ १०२॥

Why the kinds of Evidence have been here set forth.

Aph. 102. Since the establishment of [the existence of] both [soul and non-soul] is by means of evidence, the declaration thereof [i.e., of the kinds of evidence, has been here made].

a. It is only by means of evidence that both Soul and non-soul are established as being distinct, [the one from the other]: therefore has this, viz., evidence, been here declared: such is the meaning.

b. Among these [several kinds of proof], he [now] describes that one by which, especially, viz., by a proof which is one kind of inference, Nature and Soul are here to be established discriminatively:²

सामान्यता दृष्टादुभयसिड्डिः ॥ १०३॥

The existence of Soul and Nature argued from analogy.

Aph. 103. The establishment of both [Nature and Soul] is by analogy.

a. [Analogy (sámányato drishta) is that kind of evidence which is employed in the case] where, by the force [as an argument,] which the residence of any property in the subject derives from a knowledge of its being constantly accompanied [by something which it may therefore betoken], when we have had recourse to [as the means of determining this constant accompaniment,] what is, for instance, generically of a perceptible kind, [where, under such circumstances, we repeat,] anything of a different kind, i.e., not cognizable by the senses, is established; as when,

for example, having apprehended a constant accompaniment, [e.g., that an act implies an instrument], by taking into consideration such instruments as axes, &c., which are of earthy and other kinds, a quite heterogeneous, imperceptible, instrument of knowledge, viz., [the instrument named] Sense, is established [or inferred to exist]; such is what we mean by Analogy; and it is by this [species of inference], that both, [viz.,] Nature and Soul, are proved [to exist]: such is the meaning!

b. Of these [viz., Nature and Soul,] the argument from analogy for [the existence of] Nature is as follows: the Great Principle [viz., Understanding (see § 61. c.)] is formed out of the things [called] Pleasure, Pain, and Delusion, [to the aggregate of which three in equipoise (see § 61) the name of Nature is given]; because, whilst it is [undeniably,] a production, it has the characters of Pleasure, Pain, and Delusion; just as a bracelet, or the hke, formed of gold, or the like,² [has the characteristic properties of the gold, or the like, and is thereby known to have been formed out of gold, or the like].

- c. But, [as regards the argument from analogy, in proof of the existence] of Soul, [it is, as stated before, under § 66, to the following effect]: Nature is for the sake of another; because it is something that acts as a combination; as a house, for instance, [which is a combination of various parts combined for the benefit of the tenant]. In this instance, having gathered, in regard to houses, &c., the fact established on sense-perception, that they exist for the sake of [organized] bodies, for example, something of a different kind therefrom, [i.e., from Nature, viz.], Soul, is inferred [by analogy,] as something other than Nature, &c., [which, as being a compound thing, is not designed for itself]: such is the meaning.
- d. But then [some one may say], since Nature is eternal, and exertion is habitual to her, [and the result of her action is the bondage of the Soul], there should constantly be experience [whether of pleasure or of pain], and, hence, no such thing as thorough emancipation. To this he replies:²

चिदवसाना भागः॥ १०४॥

[ं] प्रषस्य त् प्रधानं पराधं संहत्यकारिताहृहा-दिवदिति। छच प्रत्यक्षसिडं देहाद्यर्थकातं गृहादिषु गृहीता तिहजातीयः पुरुषः प्रधानादिपरत्ननानु-मीयत इति ॥

When it is that exper ience ceuses.

Aph. 104. Experience [whether of pain or pleasure,] ends with [the discernment of Thought, [or Soul, as contradistinguished from Nature].

- a. By 'Thought' [we mean] Soul. Experience [whether of pain or pleasure, ceases, on the discerning thereof. As 'antecedent non-existence,' though devoid of a beginning, [see Tarka-sangraha, § 92], surceases [when the thing antecedently non-existent begins to be], so, eternal Nature [eternal, as regards the absence of any beginning,] continues [no further than] till the discernment of the difference [between Nature and Soul]; so that experience whether of pain or pleasure, does not at all times occur: such is the state of the case.1
- b. [But some one say], if Nature be agent, and Soul experiencer, then it must follow [which seems unreasonable, that another is the experiencer of [the results of] the acts done by one different. To this he replies:2

ञ्चकर्तुरपि फलोपभागाऽन्नाद्यवत् ॥ १०५ ॥

The fruit of the action is not always the agent's.

Aph. 105. The experience of the fruit may belong even to another than the agent; as in the case of food, &c.

- a. As it belongs to the cook to prepare the food, &c., and to one who was not the agent, viz., the master, to enjoy the fruit [thereof, i.e., the fruit of the cook's actions], so is the case here, also.
- b. Having stated an exoteric principle [which may serve, in practice, to silence, by the argumentum ad hominem, him on whose principles it may be valid], he [next] declares his own doctrine,² [in regard to the doubt started under § 104. b.]:

अविवेकादा तिसिद्धेः कर्तुः फलावगमः॥ १०६॥

To suppose that Soul acts and experiences is an error.

Aph. 106. Or, [to give a better account of the matter than that given in § 105], since it is from non-discrimination that it is derived, the notion that the agent [soul being mistaken for an agent,] has the fruit [of the act is a wrong notion].

a. The soul is neither an agent nor a patient; but, from the fact that the Great Principle [the actual agent (see § 97. b.)] is reflected in it, there arises the conceit of its being an agent. 'Or, since it is from non-discrimination;' that is to say, because it is from the failure to discriminate between Nature and Soul, that this takes place, i.e., that conceit takes place, that it is the agent that experiences the fruit; [whereas the actual agent is Nature, which, being unintelligent, can experience neither pain nor pleasure].
